As Turkey Sees Us
Phoeniciani in America Bite Off Twelve Grapes
Christianity Tires China

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1930, King Features, Synd., Inc.

MODERN science tells you that matter in motion gains weight. News, also, gains as it travels.

The Turkish newspaper, Akcham, describes, sympathetically, results of our recent earthquake in Wall Street.

"Former American millionaires are now eating bread, cheese and cabbage," says the editor.

Some American millionaires would gain in health and grace if they adopted that diet, without adding bootleg mixtures to it.

Akcham's "news" from America is not more inaccurate than some of our news from Turkey, and far less inaccurate than the average American idea of the Turkish people.

Much power in the Turks, great self-respect, and a high sense of honor.

Inscriptions found on rocks in the valley of the Amazon, revive the belief that the sea-faring Phoenicians, from the far end of the Mediterranean, discovered America long before Columbus and the earlier Lief Ericson. Archaeologists think the Phoenicians went up the great Amazon with their ships and founded a South American city, 4000 years ago.

Someone should write a good history of those Phoenicians with their restless longing for navigation, so unlike the other non-Semitic tribes. First of all men, they sailed out of sight of land with only the stars, no compass, to guide them. They first sailed past the Rock of Gibraltar into the Atlantic to mine tin with slaves in the British islands.

They brought wealth from every port, by trade or piracy, depending on the strength of the port.

Now they are gone. Their rivers that ran back through the mountain gorges are silted up. Sand piles cover acres that were fertile. The cedars are gone from Mount Lebanon.

Nearly 2000 years before Columbus was born, Alexander administered the final blow to the greatness of Phoenicia, which had already fallen under Persia's yoke.

Attacking Tyre, which offered submission, but would not let him enter the city to sacrifice to the Tyrian god Heracles, he killed 8000 Tyrians, sold 30,000 into slavery. And building Alexandria, he changed the channels of trade and struck a death blow at Phoenicia's commercial greatness.

Rome ended Semitic commercial power in the Mediterranean with the destruction of Carthage.

Young Alexander, building his mole from the mainland to attack Tyre with his siege engines, and old Cato, the Roman, with his "Carthage must be destroyed," ended Semitic national commercial supremacy. Cato's repetition was as powerful as Alexander's engines.

Time has wiped out the empires of Alexander and of Rome.

And on the other side of the Atlantic crossed by Semitic ships, so long ago, Semitic trading genius rules in a new world.

There is more organized Semitic trade between 14th and 59th sts. in New York than there ever was in all Phoenicia and Carthage.

The Spaniards have a method of insuring luck throughout a new year that may interest the Palm Beach intelligentsia.

As the old year dies and the clock strikes 12 you try to bite 12 grapes, one at a time, from a bunch laid before you. Use only your teeth, not your hands.

As you bite off the 12 grapes, one for each month of the new year, friends slap your back, push you, and otherwise interfere. Success means 12 lucky months.

The grapes not having fermented, the game is still legal in this country, and might be very amusing.

Chinese mobs have wrecked an English Baptist Mission, church, hospital and school near Tsinanfu.

Good missionaries, working to heal the bodies and save the souls of Chinese, are victims of bitter anti-Christian propaganda started by the "patriotic" Kuomintang.

The anti-Christian drive is headed, openly, by Hutsui-Yuan, commissioner of education, which gives an official character to the attack on the Christians. None of the latter were killed. They were requested to get out, their buildings wrecked.

In judging the Chinese mob, we should ask ourselves what a Christian mob would probably do to Chinese missionaries here, seeking to convert Christian children to the Chinese religion by wholesale.

And we must remember that

COAST GUARD ELUDED BY RUM SHIP

Lands Liquor Near Newport, and State Troopers Seize 250 Cases on Truck

Providence, Jan. 6—Despite increased vigilance of half a dozen coast guard ships on 24-hour duty shifts on direct orders from Washington as an aftermath of the Black Duck killings, the rum fleet off Narragansett Bay early today was able to slip through the blockade and land a big load.

Part of this load was seized in a truck with 200 cases valued at $15,000, and the driver, Victor Sylvia of Little Compton, was arrested after a struggle with state troopers.

Enforcement authorities believe that fully 2000 to 3000 cases were brought ashore on some abandoned farm. A vigorous search began to-

Guarding Royalty in Italy

London, Jan. 6 (INS)—Because of fears of wholesale assassination plots, the Italian authorities are taking unparalleled precautions to prevent any untoward incident when Princess Marie Jose of Belgium is married to Crown Prince Umberto of Italy on Wednesday, it was revealed today.

A dispatch from the Italian capital to the Evening News today gives striking details of these precautionary measures, whose proportions reveal clearly the fear that are felt that anarchists may attempt attacks on the lives of royalty some time between now and the time of the marriage.

Airplane flying has been stopped all over Italy, the dispatch declared, until after the wedding because of fears that a plot may be hatched to bomb the beautiful princess and her husband-to-be from the air.

The usually busy commercial airlines of the Italian nation have been brought to an absolute standstill, and not a propeller will whirl over the Eternal City until the marriage ceremony has been completed and the future Queen of Italy is

The commission would consist of seven members, three to be appointed by the speaker of the House, two by the president of the Senate and two by the Governor.

The same representative also filed a bill to permit Worcester to borrow $2,000,000 outside the debt limit for the purpose of constructing a municipal memorial auditorium.

TAX DECISION HITS MANY

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—Millions of dollars and many individuals were affected today by a Supreme Court decision, holding that the difference in value in securities at the time of death and the value at the time of sale of such inherited property constituted taxable income.

The test case was brought by E. Franklin Brewster, from western New York.

Brewster insisted the tax should be levied only on the difference in value at the time he received the securities and the time of sale, holding considerable time had elapsed since his father's death and the time the securities actually came into his possession.

The point has been raised in a number of cases involving large sums of money.

TAFT SO ILL HE HAS QUIT ALL WORK

Chief Justice Must Go South for Rest; Is Highly Nervous

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—Chief Justice Taft is preparing to leave Washington for Asheville, N. C., to recuperate from severe fatigue caused by his recent trip to Cincinnati.

He has been forced by a weakened physical condition to abruptly end his court work and go away for a rest.

The former President has been suffering from insomnia and his nerves were impaired by the death of his brother, Charles P. Taft, last week and the consequent strain placed upon him by the necessity of going to Cincinnati for the funeral.

It was arranged today, before the Supreme Court gathered, that he would not attend the session.

ASSOCIATES WORRIED

The chief justice is in a highly nervous condition caused by a recurrence of bladder trouble, which he suffered about six years ago, which then yielded to treatment.

His condition has caused worry within the inner court circles for some time.

Last summer while in a weakened condition due to the discharge of his exacting official duties, the chief justice went to Cincinnati to visit his brother and over-taxed himself.

He exhausted himself in visiting various places of his childhood in the city, and returned to Washington in such a weakened condition that he was forced to enter a hospital. After treatment there he went to his summer home at Murray Bay, Quebec, where his condition showed improvement.

HAS OVERWORKED

Mr. Taft is 72 years old. He has been working hard at his task of the head of the Supreme Court, however. It is understood that Justice Van Devanter will take over his routine duties.

The chief justice has been watching his own health very closely for several years. He has placed himself on a strict diet and has so arranged his household as to make it unnecessary for him to expend undue energy in going about.

Mr. Taft returned to Washington last fall after suffering an accident at Murray Bay which irritated his general nervous condition. He was able, however, to attend the conference of circuit court judges to examine the condition of business in federal courts throughout the country and was able to attend all sessions of the court up to the recess in December.

Blaine Wants U. S. to See India as Free

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—A resolution for recognition of the independence of India by the United States was introduced today by Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin. It provides that the Senate pledge support to the President whenever he may deem it proper to recognize the sovereignty and the independence of India.

Blaine said that he intended later to discuss the subject, with pleas for Philippine independence and relations both to the London naval conferences.

Thousands Hear Mayor

In addition to the nearly 5000 in Symphony Hall, thousands of radio listeners today heard Mayor James M. Curley deliver his inaugural address. (Staff photo.)

MAYOR PAYS TOUCHING TRIBUTE TO ABSENT WIFE AT EXERCISES

Over the air from Symphony Hall, where for the third time he became mayor of Boston, James M. Curley today sent a message of tribute to his wife, prevented by illness from being present.

His inaugural address was, for the moment, suspended. The crowd of 5000 that jammed the auditorium to the very doors was hushed. The new-old mayor spoke into a radio microphone, quietly, his eyes and his thoughts beyond the crowd.

"I greet the thousands of this [illegible] audience and one in particular is included—one who has been by my side for 24 years at every public exercise.

"She would be here today if God so willed. For her I ask the prayers of all."

At her home in the Jamaicaway, alone with a nurse, Mrs. Curley sat before a radio and received the message.

OUTLINES PLANS

That was the high spot of the inauguration. Immediately thereafter the mayor launched into his address, outlining his $15,000,000 city development program, his plans for new streets, for hospitalization, for the airport.

But Mrs. Curley, who was not present, dominated the program.

And when it was ended, the mayor, scheduled for a reception at City Hall, went home instead, to tell her, first hand, of the inauguration.

A short time before Mr. Curley, accompanied by his six children, left home for the Symphony Hall exercises, Mrs. Curley had been informed by Dr. Maldn J. English, who has attended her during her long illness, that she could not go.

She had bravely hoped to. And courageously she received the order to stay at home.

She gave him a kiss and a hand clasp and a message of God-speed.

"I sincerely pray that God will give you strength and vision to fulfil the office in conformity with its highest and best traditions."

Then Mr. Curley left, surrounded by a detail of police, to become again the city's chief executive.

RUGG GIVES OATH

He took the oath of office administered by Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg, repeating the pledge to nation, state and city in a voice scarcely audible to those seated and standing in the rear of the hall. He kissed the smiling Mayor Curley that Boston has known at two previous inaugurals.

Behind him and to his right sat his six children, James, Jr., Mary, George, Paul, Leo and little Francis. But their mother was not at his side and he was a different man.

Even the crowd had sensed it when the official party entered the hall and mounted to the platform. "She's not with him," the murmur went around the room.

And out of deference to his sorrow, no apparent to the throng, the applause of greeting was very slight.

Later, when he had finished his address, the crowd was to stand and applaud him for fully five minutes without a pause.

The official party included besides the mayor and his children, the chief justice; City Messenger Edward J. Leary, Rev. James F. Kelly, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Jamaica Plain; Sheriff John A. Kelliher, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, City Clerk Wilfred Doyle and members of the City Council.

NOTABLES ATTEND

Nearly 100 representatives of city and state organizations, the army and navy, were seated on the platform in a semi-circle, forming with the flowers and ferns a picturesque background for the actors' roles.

Former Mayor Nichols entered soon after the program was under way. Other dignitaries present included Maj. Gen. Preston Brown,

CURLEY URGES PLANS FOR 50 YEARS AHEAD

By HENRY L. DAILY

A $15,000,000 program of public improvements for Boston was outlined today by Mayor James M. Curley in his inaugural address at Symphony Hall.

While stressing the necessity of averting a burdensome tax rate, the new mayor, however, pointed out the "need of a program for the development of industry, commerce and municipal activities, anticipating so far as may be humanly possible, the requirements of the next half century."

"Such a program should be undertaken at an early date and pending its adoption our expenditures should be limited to immediate requirements which will not permit of delay," he declared.

"The increased cost of adminis-

HATCH IS GIVEN THREE YEARS

J. Philip Hatch of Brookline, chairman and produce broker, was sentenced to three to five years in state prison today in Superior Court after pleading guilty to $113,518 bank larcenies.

His plea was made on indictment charging 66 counts of theft from the Boston branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

He was alleged to have obtained the money through presenting fictitious drafts on purported carloads of produce bound for Boston.

Hatch's alleged thefts were discovered after he had fled from this city. He was arrested in New Orleans when he stepped off the boat from Honduras.

2 Youths, Armed, Caught Near Store

An alleged attempt to hold up a store in Woodrow ave., Dorchester, was blocked today when Patrolman John H. Delvey sighted two youths in an alley across the street and placed them under arrest.

Patrolman Delvey, suspicious of the youths' actions, watched them peering out of the alley for some time as customers went in and out of the store.

On Alfred W. Hayes, 17, of Tucker st., Milton, was found a blackjack and loaded 32-calibre revolver. On Joseph Applebaum, 18, of Brush Hill rd., Milton, the officer found an imitation pistol.

Girl Jilts Student; Gets Acid in Face

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—Morris Hoffman of New Rochelle, a student at New York University, today was held on a charge that he threw acid in the face of a girl who had refused to marry him.

Hoffman was arrested on the complaint of Miss Katharine Monahan, a night club hostess, who said he had thrown acid in her face when she told him they could not be married because of their different religious faiths.

Smith Admits Part in Death Holdup

After several hours' grilling, Paul H. Smith, 20, of Malden, broke down today and confessed being implicated in the murder of Joseph Fendell in the latter's store at Saugus, Jan. 2, according to dispatches from Philadelphia, where Smith was arrested for larceny of an automobile.

The confession was obtained by State Detective William Murray who went to Philadelphia with extradition papers to bring the Malden youth back to Essex county for trial. Murray was assisted by Lieut. John Lenehan of Malden.

Young Smith admitted taking part in the holdup in which the

Ex-Convict Says Film Star Slew Taylor

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6 (INS)—An unnamed "film celebrity" killed William Desmond Taylor, director, in February, 1922, according to an alleged new revelation by Otis Hefner, pardoned ex-convict, whose story today was offered to the district attorney's office.

A revived investigation of the murder was in prospect.

District Attorney Buron Fitts, who recently declared he had in his possession all but "one missing link" in the chain of evidence that would convict Taylor's slayer, awaited details before he would comment.

Fitts said Hefner had told "a dozen different stories about it. I am not going to reopen the case solely on anything Hefner has to say."

The names of two motion picture stars of seven years ago were interwoven with the investigation.

One was Mabel Normand, original Mack Sennett bathing beauty and one of the most scintillating

ROURKE PUBLIC WORKS HEAD

Although, contrary to expectations, Mayor Curley announced only one appointment officially after assuming office today, the identities of several other appointees became known through other sources.

After announcing that he had asked for the resignations of eight officials, the Mayor said that Joseph A. Rourke would be commissioner of public works to succeed James H. Sullivan.

The probabilities for other changes, however, were understood to be Francis J. Brennan as city treasurer, succeeding Frank L. Brier; Capt. John J. Lydon as soldiers' relief commissioner, succeeding John W. Reth, and Joseph P. Lomasney as a member of the transit commission.

Brier resigned voluntarily as soon day for the cached goods, according to Corp. Otto Graeminger and Trooper George W. McGovern, who arrested Sylvia.

RUM FLEET OFF NEWPORT ELUDES COAST GUARD TO LAND LIQUOR

State troopers are positive that a large load came through the rum blockade. They base this assumption upon several factors. The first is that they received a "tip" of this landing, and were told to be on the highway leading to Little Compton, near Newport.

TRUCK DRIVER FLEES

The arrest was made at this point, where the two men sighted a truck running without lights. When the driver spotted the coupe parked across the road by the troopers, he put on his light and speeded up. A half mile chase resulted in the arrest, after the driver jumped in the ground and ran into the nearby woods.

The second important factor is that the whisky, all of it seemingly high grade imported stuff, was found wrapped in burlap which was soaked in salt water. Practically all liquor seized in recent years from rum running ships has been found sewed up in burlap.

State troopers say that the usual capacity of ships running into the harbor with liquor loads, is about 2000 to 3000 cases.

The handcuffed truck driver was brought to Providence, where he pleaded not guilty before U. S. Commissioner Fred L. Otis. Formal hearing was set for Jan. 21.

Coincident with the seizure of the truck load of whisky was an official confirmation today of reports of several coast guardsmen being under arrest for drunkenness and theft of seized liquor.

Commander L. T. Chalker, chief of staff at New London, Ct., said that 39 men faced courts-martial. Of these, 18 were charged with pilfering liquor and 24 were held for being intoxicated.

BOSS BARS CIVIC LEAGUE

Meanwhile, an announcement was made today by U. S. Attorney Henry M. Boss, Jr., that he would not approve any visits to the Black Duck by Liberal Civic League officials of Boston.

This statement proved a great disappointment to Edward W. Crooker, league counsel, who had been prepared to go on board the bullet-riddled boat with technical experts. These specialists had planned to study the angles from which the machine gun bullets had penetrated the ship and killed three men, wounding the fourth.

Ernest J. Eshfordson, collector of the port, today prepared a special report for Boston customs officials on the action of the Coast Guard in relieving from duty Edward L. Foley of Boston. Foley, who had been guarding seized liquor, was temporarily dismissed on a charge of intoxication.

Until the report is read in Boston, action on Foley's alleged conduct will be suspended.

In a private report to Surveyor of the Port Herman Hormel, Foley today stated the circumstances surrounding his suspension for drunkenness.

Foley, former Boston policeman and public health department watchman, will remain suspended. Collector Eshford said today, while the latter's recommendations go to Washington.

Walsh Introduces Bay State Protest

Washington, Jan. 6 (INS)—Within 15 minutes after the Senate reassembled today following its recess, the prohibition issue was injected into its proceedings.

Sen. Walsh (D.) of Massachusetts, a wet, filed a number of resolutions, adopted by a mass meeting in Boston, Jan. 2, protesting against the "wanton and reckless killing of citizens of Massachusetts by the Coast Guard."

The resolution referred to the shooting of three bootleggers by a coast guard patrol off the Rhode Island shore. Walsh did not debate the protest.

A moment later, Sen. Brookhart (R.) of Iowa, dry, placed in the Congressional record a radio speech made recently by Sen. Jones (R.) of Washington, author of the famous "Five and Ten" law. In it, Jones upheld prohibition enforcement and denied the law could not be enforced.

Mayor Misses $3000 Rug Left 4 Years Ago in Office

Mayor Curley injected a mystery into his reception at City Hall today.

His eagle eye fell upon the floor of the mayoral office—his official habitat for the next four years—and he exclaimed:

"What's become of that nice rug we had here!"

There was no answer from the crowd assembled there to greet him and he continued:

"Why, that was worth about $3000!"

From the fringe of the crowd somebody remarked: "Well, you've never lost your smile, Jim."

The mayor answered: "No, but we've lost a good rug."

HOUSE OFFERS $435,231,000 'WAR' BILL

Measure Carries Huge Sum for Rivers and Other Non-Military Uses

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—Lacking definite conclusions from President Hoover's economical survey of the War Department, the House appropriations committee today reported the supply bill for the fiscal year 1931, calling for an expenditure of $435,231,000, an increase of $442,000 over the current fiscal year.

With the idea that economies may be effected through the survey, however, the committee wrote into the bill a provision that would prevent the usage of any of the money appropriated for any other purpose in the event President Hoover decides upon curtailment of activities provided in the measure.

Although carrying an increased appropriation, the supply bill is $2,787,000 less than the budget estimates. It sets aside $237,000,000 for military purpose, an increase of $6,019,000 over the current year, and $117,173,000 for non-military activities, including the Panama Canal, a decrease of $5,577,000 as compared with 1930.

ARMY HOUSING CUT

The permanent appropriations amount to $9,627,000, of which $1,375,000 is for military purposes and $8,251,000 is for non-military activities. With this, the total outlay for the next fiscal year is brought to $443,858,000.

The reduction in the budget estimates partially was effected by curtailing the appropriation for the army housing program to the extent of $2,000,000.

The decrease in the non-military activity largely resulted from the lack of an appropriation for the Inland Waterways Corporation and for return contributions on flood control work. The increase for military purposes was due to greater outlays for the quartermaster corps, amounting to $2,051,000 for improved uniforms, acquisition of lands and for regular supplies.

AIR CORPS INCREASE.

An increase from $34,910,000 to $36,087,000 for the army air corps was granted and an increase of $1,396,000 for the ordnance department for purchase, Christie tanks and development of equipment for mechanized forces.

For the navy of the army $133,557,000 was set aside, but the entire outlay for the finance department amounts to $135,962,000. This will provide for a regular army personnel of 12,000 commissioned officers, 1038 warrant officers, 118,730 enlisted men, 2000 Philippine scouts.

It also provides for 190,000 national guardsmen, 37,500 reserves and citizens' military training camps and 127,500 students in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

The engineering corps was given a total of $92,480,000 for non-military activities.

New Army Tank Can Do 70 Miles an Hour on Roads

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—Army tank supremacy was conceded to the British by Maj. Gen. C. C. Williams, chief of army ordnance, before the House sub-committee on appropriations.

While the American army has a tank capable of between 40 and 50 miles an hour on open fields, and 70 miles an hour on roads, he said it was still in an experimental stage. No other country, he said, has developed a tank of similar speed. He recommended purchase of vehicles for complete tests.

SLAIN WOMAN'S HUSBAND HELD IN BOMBING

His Brother Also Jailed After an Investigation of the Christmas Killing

Seat Pleasant, Md., Jan. 6 (AP)—Herman Brady, whose wife, Naomi Hall Brady, was killed by a bomb sent to her in the wrappings of a Christmas present, was held today with his brother, Leroy Brady.

The authorities declined to divulge the purpose of their detention, but it was learned that the man had been confined to the jail at Upper Marlboro after several hours of rigorous cross-examination.

Meanwhile, the police made known that an uncle of the two men, Clarence W. Brady, who was arrested on Friday, had convinced them he was not implicated in the bombing outrage. The latter was closely questioned as to his relations with the dead woman, particularly with respect to assertions he had sought to marry her, before she became the wife of his nephew.

It was understood he had intimated that Herman and Leroy Brady might have had a part in the sending of the bomb.

The detention of Leroy came as a surprise since not until yesterday had he been mentioned in connection with the case. He is a Washington automobile mechanic, 26 years of age, and married. Herman is a farmer, 23 years old.

comedienness of her day. She is now in a sanitarium near here fighting the "white plague" and is near death, according to her friends.

At the time of the original investigation she was accused of any complicity. She had been a caller at the bungalow of the director returning a few some time before his body was found.

The other star was Mary Miles Minter, then a young girl. Love letters allegedly written to Taylor by Miss Minter were found in his pajamas and she was questioned by police but also exonerated. Miss Minter was recently reported recuperating at a sanitarium following a nervous breakdown.

Prosecutor Fitts Says He Doubts Convict's Story

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6 (INS)—"I do not believe Otis Hefner knows anything about the William Desmond Taylor murder, and I am not convinced sufficiently to make any effort to find out where he is."

This was the declaration today of Dist. Atty. Buron Fitts when he read dispatches from San Francisco that Hefner, an ex-convict, had revealed the name of the slayer of the motion picture director.

BRANCH BANK BILL OFFERED

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—A bill to authorize national banks to establish or acquire branches within the limit of the respective federal reserve districts was introduced today by Representative Beedy, Republican, Maine.

The measure was introduced shortly after the House banking committee organized and prepared to hold hearings on several banking measures. It would provide that state banks might be members of the federal reserve system without reference to the geographical area in which they might establish branches.

aged storekeeper was shot to death, but denied any knowledge of who killed the man.

In an effort to bring about the arrest of his two companions who participated in the holdup that ended in the killing, the police grilled Smith for hours, but he steadfastly refused to divulge their names.

Philadelphia police trapped Smith when they began trailing a Massachusetts car in that city. Smith tried to escape but a motorcycle cop pocketed the car near the curb in Oxford st., Philadelphia.

A young man, riding with Smith, leaped from the moving machine and escaped. The Malden boy, however, failed to show the fight expected of him by the possessor which have been scouring the Saugus woods prepared to "shoot it out" with the suspected killer, should he attempt to be cornered.

Smith parried questions of detectives in the central station for several hours, giving several different stories to explain his possession of the car he loaded with liquor and a sedan with a Massachusetts license.

Detective Michael Flannery then went to the telephone and called the Boston police. He returned and informed the youth that Malden policemen said he was accused of murdering a man in a holdup at Saugus on Thursday.

"Want to say anything about them?" asked Flannery.

Smith stared at the detective a moment and sank down in his chair.

Lynn authorities have also manifested an interest in the arrest, claiming they are anxious to question Smith relative to an attempted holdup of a Chinese laundry there Thursday night within two hours of the killing of the aged Fendell here.

The Malden police records show that Smith has used the alias of Paul Hanson at different times and that he first became known to the police in 1926, when he was only 17 years of age. At that time he was charged with attempted larceny and the case was placed on file.

Royal Bridal Party Stages Boar Hunt

stalled in her new home, the Evening News declares.

Princess and Prince Join in Boar Hunt

Castel Porziano, Jan. 6 (AP)—Princess Marie Jose of Belgium and the guests who Wednesday will see her married to Prince Humbert of Italy partook today of the largest hunting party this famous old estate has ever known.

After shooting in the morning the guests, who included princes of the blood of Belgium, Italy, Great Britain and Bulgaria, and others of station only less imposing, sat down to a sumptuous hunt breakfast, to congratulate each other on their marksmanship and make merry with pre-nuptial fervor.

After their repast the party returned to Rome in order to receive deputations of the senate and chamber and the Fascist grand council, who presented wedding gifts and made addresses of loyalty.

The guns of the kings and princes brought down a number of stags and deer and boars, all of which were distributed to Roman charitable organizations for Epiphany dinner tables of poor families.

The hunt lasted a little more than two hours. All the male guests were in sporting costume. The preserve was reached by automobiles, and its approaches were zealously guarded by plain clothesmen and Carabinari. At the gate Count Guerrieri, whose title is "the Great Huntsman of the Court," welcomed the party.

The party enjoyed excellent hunting weather, clear and sunshiny, with just a touch of warmth to the air. The lodge is a fine 16th century building, still showing traces fortifications erected to defend it against pirates.

It is located about midway between Rome and Ostia on the way to the sea and is situated in the midst of a great pine forest which abounds with deer, boar and other game.

Rome Gives Princess Marie Royal Welcome

Rome, Jan. 6 (AP)—Rome, tumultuous in her welcome, has opened wide her arms to Marie Jose, Princess of Belgium, who on Wednesday will marry the Italian Crown Prince Humbert.

The 23-year-old princess arrived with her parents and brothers from Brussels, and with her betrothed was driven smiling from Central Railway station to the Quirinal palace while hundreds of thousands cheered and applauded.

At the palace Marie Jose, her father, King Albert, her mother, Queen Elizabeth, the Italian royalties and Prince Humbert came twice to a balcony in response to the acclaim of the crowds. The Princess and Prince Humbert later thrice again appeared and bowed before the tumult of the welcome was stilled.

Below them the crowd was so great that women became hysterical and some of them fainted. Once the crowd broke through a cordon of infantry and an officer drawing his sword to order his men to reform accidentally cut one of the spectators.

The first carriage of the procession was occupied by King Victor Emanuel and King Albert. The Italian King wore the gray green silver bedecked uniform of an Italian marshal. King Albert had on the gold-braided khaki of a Belgian marshal.

The two queens, Helena of Italy and Elizabeth of Belgium, were in the next carriage. Queen Helena wore white, with a rich mantle of navy blue, and a small hat of the same color. Queen Elizabeth was attired in pink moire with a velvet mantle bordered with moire and fox fur. She wore a hat of turtle dove mauve.

The Belgian Queen appeared quite youthful and gay, despite a recent attack of influenza. The crowds at first mistook her for Princess Marie Jose and shouted "Long live the Princess!" at her. Elizabeth laughed in delight.

The engaged couple were in the third carriage, after which came a succession of vehicles, manned with coachmen and footmen in red livery and white wigs, carrying princes of the Italian house and ladies and gentlemen in waiting at the Italian and Belgian courts.

it has not been divinely revealed to the Chinese, as to us, that ours is the only true religion.

They take Confucius and his teachings as seriously as we take our Christianity.

Gen. Smuts, from South Africa, traveling here, congratulates us on joining the World Court, and predicts that our entrance into the League of Nations will be the next step.

He is a little ahead of time, even with the court, for we are not in it yet. But his forecast of events is probably accurate.

A new chapter in American national life will start when we begin getting orders and decisions from across the water.

Various Southern and Southwestern states will fight the efforts of union labor to organize their territories.

Chambers of Commerce in Texas and Oklahoma reaffirm their determination to uphold the open shop. A long industrial fight is foreseen.

In New England there are feeble indications of that "civil war" which Ida Tarbell thinks may be born of prohibition.

After the recent killing of rum-runners by coast guardsmen posters inviting enlistment in the coast guard were torn down in Boston.

The Government, wisely avoiding conflict, has closed and temporarily abandoned the Boston coast guard recruiting station.

There will not be any civil war, and prohibition will stay in the Constitution. But there will be a good deal of unpleasant discussion and shooting.

FIVE ARE OVERCOME BY SMOKE IN GLOUCESTER FIRE

Symphony Hall Jammed to Its Doors by Thousands, High and Low; for Mayor Curley's Inaugural Conspicuous among the many notables to congratulate the mayor was ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, who is a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination.

Father Finds Family Is Trapped in Fire

Gloucester, Jan. 6—A man and woman, and their three small children, were overcome by smoke early today when fire of undetermined origin broke out in the basement of the 2½-story wooden dwelling at 437 Main st.

F. J. Feldman, his wife and three children were sleeping when Feldman was aroused by the crackling of flames. Jumping out of his bed he opened the door leading to the hallway and encountered a wall of flame. He rushed back to his bedroom and telephoned Gloucester fire headquarters.

When the apparatus arrived, Chief Homer R. Marchant, with Deputy Chief John Crowley, rushed up through the smoke-filled stairways and assisted Feldman and his family to the street.

When they reached the street all five collapsed. They were given first-aid treatment by firemen and were taken to the home of a neighbor.

The fire, which started in the basement, worked its way through a poolroom on the first floor into the Feldman apartment.

Fire officials were given an hour's stiff battle, but kept the fire confined to the one building. An investigation is being made today to determine the cause of the blaze.

3 BOYS TRAPPED ON GIANT ROCK

New Haven, Ct., Jan. 6 (AP)—Three ambitious youths are today recuperating from a ghastly Sunday afternoon experience in which they were trapped on the side of Looming West Rock and rescued as they seemed doomed to fall hundreds of feet to death on jagged shale beneath them. They were rescued by firemen who raced their apparatus ten miles to the top of the rock and then lowered themselves to the youths.

The victims of the escapade are Richard Engel, Arthur Kelley and Andrew O'Donnell, all residents of the north end of New Haven. They were rescued by firemen under Capt. Robert Daley.

New Haven's two rocks, East and West, have taken many victims over the years, possessing a deadly attraction for adventuresome young men. No one has scaled them. The route up the two sheer faces of stone seems easy but always those who attempt to climb find themselves at length where they can go neither up nor down.

BAN ON 'ALKY' IN VARNISH

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—Instructions that alcohol used in making varnishes and lacquers must be further denatured were issued today by Prohibition Commissioner Doras.

It had been reported to the commission that ethyl alcohol used in the manufacture of varnishes and lacquer was being converted by bootleggers and used for beverage purposes.

The new orders provide that to every 100 gallons of ethyl alcohol there must be added four gallons of denatured wood alcohol and ten gallons of normal butyl alcohol, or refined fusel oil, or amyl alcohol.

Doran said he thought the new ingredients would end the conversion.

Wilkins Finds Base Safe In Quake

Deception Island, Antarctica, Jan. 6 (Via S. S. Melville and KUP, wireless station)—Our Lockheed-Vega monoplane Los Angeles, with Parker Cramer piloting, has reached Deception Island.

The steamship William Scoresby from which we flew, arrives about midnight.

Our friends at Deception were all excited about the earthquake which shook the anchorage severely. The harbor bottom subsided near the beach, dropping 15 feet or more, and carrying with it the that happened two days ago and jetty and the light overhead railway.

The steamship Melville, at anchor, pitched and tossed, the decks weaving more than in a heavy sea. Fortunately the buildings ashore and our spare plane sustained no damage.

Today the beach is issuing clouds of steam, an extraordinary phenomenon, surrounded as it is, with high snow covered mountains.

People at Deception were badly startled, particularly as the shock occurred just before they were to attend a burial service over a workman accidentally killed a few hours before.

We have returned to Deception after making four long flights over the Antarctic, each flight covering areas never before seen by human eyes. The total of our discoveries so far is 300 miles of new coast line, four new islands, and verification of positions plotted last year.

Auto Is Wrecked, Girls Uninjured

Norwalk, Ct., Jan. 6 (INS)—After their automobile tore off 70 feet of fence, turned turtle, righted itself and ended up against a tree, two Waterbury girls today escaped with but a shaking up and slight scratches.

The two girls, Miss Kathryn Palomba, 23, a school teacher, and her sister, Elizabeth, an office clerk, both of Waterbury, were turning a corner on the Post road when something went wrong with the steering gear and the big sedan went out of control.

W. C. T. U. Replies to Jones Law Critic

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 6 (AP)—Headquarters of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union today issued a statement saying that a study of indictments and convictions throughout the United States had convinced the organization that trivial prohibition law violators have not been punished under the Jones law.

In a statement issued tonight the W. C. T. U. said that its study had been prompted by a statement attributed to Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois that he voted against the Jones law because he feared college boys with pint flasks would be sent to Leavenworth.

ATHEISTS' WAR ON XMAS OPENS

Communists wish to suppress Christmas entirely as a holiday and to make it an ordinary working day.

Thirty-six thousand Atheists will march through the streets of Moscow tomorrow headed by a hearse carrying the "corpse" of religion, which will be burned and scattered. Miniature churches, mosques and synagogues will be carried on floats and will also be burned.

ENDS PERIL OF MONOXIDE GAS

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 6 (AP)—A practical means of eliminating carbon monoxide, the gas that takes an annual toll of hundreds of lives when automobile engines are left running in closed garages, is claimed in the discovery of a Johns Hopkins University professor, announced today.

Dr. J. C. W. Fraser, the B. N. Baker professor of chemistry at the university, made the announcement that tests had shown a motor equipped with his device could run indefinitely in a closed garage without liberating carbon monoxide. Offensive odors from automobile exhausts which abound in heavy traffic can be suppressed by the chemical action, and smoke also will be entirely consumed, Prof. Fraser added.

Carbon monoxide is produced by incomplete combustion and the scientist's discovery is a chemical which, when the exhaust vapors pass over it mixed with air converts the monoxide to harmless carbon dioxide.

Expect to Find Explorer's Grave

Ottawa, Jan. 6—The mystery of Sir John Franklin is nearing solution. The Canadian government has authorized the payment of $1000 for data which, it is believed, may lead to the discovery of the last resting place of the great English explorer and the recovery of the priceless records of his expedition.

The only written record of Franklin's Arctic expedition was a brief report found by Capt. McClintock in the '50s, telling of the explorer's death and the privations of the survivors who were trying to make the mouth of Back's Fish River. For years explorers and navigators have sought for the main records.

EDDIE CANTOR Rises to Say:

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6—This time Washington had a bigger and better fire. The one before was just a rehearsal. I wonder who they are trying to "smoke out" down there?

Can it be Borah?

If it is, they'll never do it with fire—or water—but "fire-water," that's something different again.

In the first fire they saved some very important papers—from the last administration, I presume.

If these fires continue in Washington, I would suggest that at the next election we choose for President not an engineer, but a good, experienced fireman.

British Tanker Is Reported Aground

Mexico City, Jan. 6—The British tanker Lunula is reported at Puerto Mexico to have run aground six miles from that port. It was believed the ship was in no immediate danger and no casualties had been reported. A gale from the north had caused the difficulty of the craft.

It was learned that several tugs had gone out from Puerto Mexico in an attempt to pull the tanker off the bar and the English steamer San Sotico was reported standing by. A heavy sea was running but it was thought that the tugs could reach the ship.

Lindy's 'Flying Tank' an All-Night Hawk

Los Angeles, Jan. 6 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was here today to inspect his secretly-built monoplane, designed to "stay up all night."

That was the way Lindbergh described it when asked the reason for its unusually large fuel tanks, which hold 450 gallons of gasoline, for want of a better name the new plane had been dubbed "The Flying Gas Tank."

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh arrived from Kingman, Ariz., completing a leisurely transcontinental flight.

Lindbergh inspected fields and equipment of the Transcontinental Air Transport line.

Rumors that Lindbergh's new monoplane would be used for a long nonstop flight were laid at rest when the colonel said the extra capacity fuel tanks were provided for the purpose of "staying up overnight," or for overnight trips to out-of-the-way places.

The new plane is one of the open cockpit type, is fitted with dual controls to accommodate Mrs. Lindbergh, and has an estimated cruising speed of 140 miles an hour.

ECONOMY ESSENTIAL IN CITY AFFAIRS, CURLEY SAYS

WOULD KEEP TAX RATE DOWN

trying the activities of the city in 1930 as against 1929, due to increase in personnel and salaries, will be approximately $1,000,000, and this excess cost must be offset if we are to avoid an increase in the tax rate that will be burdensome," he said.

NEED FOR WORK

Continuing, the mayor read, "Changes in administrative policies due to successive changes in administrative officials, coupled with pride of origin and lack of definite objective or plans for future, are in large measure responsible for present conditions industrially, commercially and in municipal departmental administration."

Mayor Curley then referred to the expenditures of the public welfare department as an unfailing barometer as to industrial prosperity or depression, and the amount required in the closing months of 1929 he said indicated that there is dire need at present.

"Until a sane economic policy is devised unemployment will continue to exist. In its train come poverty, crime and disease; and to combat these evils it is necessary to furnish work and wages to those in need of subsistenance and employment," he said.

"The city can do much, but private industry properly encouraged can do more, and in the promotion and encouragement of commerce and industry our every effort should be directed," he stated.

FAVORS HOOVER VIEWS

Some of the major municipal improvements which would aid the unemployed, as outlined by the mayor in his address, are the expenditure outside the debt limit of $10,000,000 for the acceptance and construction of streets upon which homes or business establishments have been erected, $1,000,000 for a straddle in the Bayswater section of Orient Heights, East Boston; $750,000 for the completion of Columbus Park and Strandway, South Boston; $150,000 for a smooth paved white way in Bunker Hill st., Charlestown, and the erection of a George Robert White health unit in Madison Park, Roxbury.

With this thought in mind, Mayor Curley then approved the program of national planning inaugurated by President Hoover as a means to promote prosperity and to end, if possible, seasonal unemployment.

"An appropriation for an additional golf course has been authorized by the City Council and the park department possesses title to some 2,000,000 square feet of land in the West Roxbury section which could be cleared and made available as a golf course, and, provided no additional land were necessary, the entire amount appropriated for this purpose could be utilized in the employment of heads of families in the clearing, grading and development of this project.

PORTABLE SCHOOLS

"Accordingly I commend to your earnest and early consideration action upon this improvement which, with others contemplated, may serve a most helpful purpose."

Referring to school buildings the mayor made a strong appeal for the reduction of portable school structures and the prosecution of a construction program for a seat in a permanent school building for every pupil will perhaps represent expenditure of too great a volume to impose immediately upon the taxpayers. "I accordingly advance for serious consideration the question of a return to the loan policy on school lands and buildings until such time as the school buildings plant is brought up to the point where the only annual requirements will be those caused by the normal increase in school population and the obsolescence of buildings."

Once again Mayor Curley referred to the unemployment situation when he said: "Conditions in the building industry render it advisable to prosecute with vigor the building construction program of the Boston City Hospital, and it is my purpose to confer at once with the hospital trustees with a view to speeding up this important work.

PLAY STREETS

The mayor declared that he was in favor of lowering the death and accident rate in the streets through designating certain streets in each section of the city as play streets. He favored the policy of the Public Library trustees of establishing two branch libraries each year. He also favors the immediate building of a new L st. bathhouse and the erection of permanent concrete bleachers with a seating capacity for 10,000 persons at Columbus Park. The proposed bathhouse should contain a solarium and facilities for hot salt water bathing during the winter months.

Regarding traffic conditions at Governor sq., the mayor said: "The intolerable traffic conditions at Governor sq. have for a period of six years been the subject of plans and discussions but without results. In my opinion the time has arrived to provide relief by such the removal of surface tracks in the square."

One of the first acts of the new mayor will be a conference between the directors and the public trustees of the Elevated with a view of having the legislative act of 1925 placed in effect.

"This act authorizes," the mayor said, "the extension and alteration of the Boylston st. subway for the purpose of removing surface cars from Kenmore sq. and the improvement of street car service on Commonwealth ave. and Beacon st."

"The transportation service upon Huntington ave., South Huntington ave. and Centre st. lines has been totally inadequate to meet the needs of this fast-growing section of Boston. The Boylston st. subway should be extended to Huntington ave. and Francis st., or Brookline Village," he said.

TRAFFIC UNDERPASS

"It is desirable as a further measure of relief that an underpass for motor vehicle traffic be constructed at Commonwealth ave., under Massachusetts ave., through the use of a portion of the present mall," he added.

The mayor then declared that, in his opinion, the airport at East Boston should be extended to include Governor's Island, and further stated that he has already requested a study of the development and extension of airport activities by the planning board and Boston park commission to the end that Boston may take first place in airport facilities over any city either upon the Atlantic or Pacific Coast.

Referring to the consolidation of New England railroads, he said: "The indications are that a consolidation of New England railroads will shortly be proposed, and, in my opinion, it would be advisable that Boston refuse to assent to such consolidation unless provision be made for electrification at least within the metropolitan area, and for a belt line connecting all rail and steamship terminals."

The mayor then dwelt upon Boston's share of the cost of metropolitan activities in the sum of $4,464,227.71. He charged that the purpose of the State government was to extend its scope and control the affairs of cities and towns within the metropolitan area so that the officials in charge of cities and towns would become purely figureheads.

He said, "The deplorable feature of metropolitan district control lies in the fact that the cities and towns comprising the metropolitan district have no direct voice in the matter of expenditures and in the case of Boston are practically without representation upon the membership of the commissions."

FOR NEW FIN. COM.

"As a further measure of protection I favor the appointment of a metropolitan district finance commission, the membership to be selected by the mayors and boards of selectment in each county within the metropolitan district, and the representation to be proportionate to the annual expenditures made for the support of the metropolitan district; and the metropolitan finance Commission so appointed to be given the power to supervise, investigate and report upon all work now or hereafter conducted under or by metropolitan district commissions. Legislation to this end should be sought at an early date and I shall instruct the law department to draft a bill at once with a view to safeguarding the money of the taxpayers of the cities and towns within the metropolitan district."

STUDY OF LONDON

"I favor the appointment of a committee consisting of recognized authorities upon the subject of municipal government to investigate as to the feasibility of the creation of a metropolitan district of government fashioned possibly along the lines of the London County Council, as I am firmly of the opinion that only through the united action of the cities and towns within the metropolitan district area is worthwhile progress possible."

"The city of Boston occupies a most unfortunate and unique position as contrasted with other cities of the Commonwealth in the matter of determining its tax limit. This discrimination should no longer be tolerated. I favor the adoption of such legislation as will permit the city of Boston to fix its own tax limit. I accordingly favor the removal of the restrictions upon limit of borrowing power for sewerage purposes.

"The cities and towns in the Commonwealth are required to bear the burden of additional street construction and maintenance caused by increased automobile and truck traffic. I believe this burden should be alleviated by the distribution to the cities and towns of at least half of the revenue received by the Commonwealth from the gasolene tax for the purpose of highway construction. I shall recommend to the Legislature that legislation be enacted authorizing such a distribution.

STREET WIDENINGS

"The automobile industry, including trucks, pleasure cars and motorcycles, has increased more than 100 per cent in the last five years, while road-building throughout the country has increased only one-eighth as fast. This means that not only Boston, but every large center of population is faced with a tremendous construction program which will in many respects change the entire aspect of our cities.

"The widening of Summer st. and of L st. from the Army Base to the Strandway; the widening of Dorchester ave., from Fort Point Channel to the south; the widening of Preble st., from Dorchester ave. to the Strandway; the opportunity afforded by the reconstruction of the Federal building for an exchange of a strip of land 15 feet in width upon Devonshire st. for a similar strip in Post Office sq., and the opportunity for similar negotiations in connection with the development of the United States Hotel property are all matters obviously in need of consideration.

"The city planning board has practically completed a comprehensive thoroughfare plan designed to provide in a logical way for traffic needs during a 25-year period. Piecemeal projects are invariably wasteful. Each new improvement should fit into a general plan and add to the efficiency of those already accomplished.

TERCENTENARY

"It is my purpose to invite the cooperation of representatives of religious, educational, labor, industrial, commercial, civic and financial organizations to the number of 350 to serve in an advisory capacity with the city planning board in the creation of a 50-year plan for Boston.

"The celebration of the tercentenary of the settlement of Massachusetts Bay affords an opportunity to establish a permanent memorial to the founders, and at the same time discharge an obligation which has been too long overdue, namely, a memorial of the soldiers, sailors and marines who gave of their health and strength, even to the supreme sacrifice itself, in the late war, in order that their country, state and city might endure.

"No more fitting recognition of the enduring work of the forefathers and the war service of their successors in this generation could be devised than a memorial building which would stand not only as expression of the appreciation of their fellow citizens, but also as a reminder to the youth of this and future generations that there is no higher attribute than loyalty.

"Such a memorial building, on the westerly side of the State House, possibly on the plot bounded by Mt. Vernon, Joy and Beacon Sts., could appropriately house the Supreme Judicial Court, the Land Court, the Social Law Library and the Commission on Probation, and thereby relieve for a considerable period the overcrowding of the Suffolk County Court House."

Boston Assent to N. E. Railroad Merger Urged

"The indications are that a consolidation of New England railroads will shortly be proposed and in my opinion it would be advisable that Boston refuse to assent to such consolidation unless provision be made for electrification at least within the Metropolitan area and for a belt line connecting all rail and steamship terminals."

Prominent Westfield Man Kills Himself

Westfield, Jan. 6 (AP)—William S. Bush, 74, well-to-do farmer and for three years selectman prior to the adoption of the city form of government, committed suicide in his home by the use of illuminating gas.

Relatives were at loss to attribute a motive. He was in vigorous health. He was born in the house where he died, which is about 200 years old. His ancestors were among the earliest settlers.

A Word of Praise

Beacon, N. Y., Jan. 14, '28.

"Just a word of praise for the good work that Scott's Emulsion has done in my family."

"I have four children, ages two, five, seven and nine. They are all what I call 'Scott's Emulsion babies', as they all take Scott's Emulsion regularly."

"The youngest child, age two years and one month, won first prize in a Baby Show that was held in Newburgh, N. Y. last August. Of 126 babies that were in the contest, my baby 'brought home the bacon'. I must say we all know that her health is due to using Scott's Emulsion."

"Two of my other children won similar prizes in past years and we always believe that it has been Scott's Emulsion that also brought them home with first prizes."

"The reason I am writing is because I want you and the World to know what Scott's Emulsion will do for children. It is the greatest health-builder I know of."

Yours truly,
JOHN O'DONNELL.

Now Millions More Stop "Dosing" Colds

Better External Treatment Wins New Users All Over the World

Every year since the introduction of Vicks VapoRub, more and more people have given up the old-fashioned way of "dosing" colds, and have turned to the modern method of treating them externally. Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

Best for Children's Colds

From the very first Vicks has been appreciated, especially by mothers of young children, because it checks colds without risk of upsetting delicate stomachs as "dosing" is so apt to do.

Just "rub-in" Vicks salve through the skin like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness; at the same time, it gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled direct to the inflamed air passages.

Demand Increases Each Year

As more and more people appreciate this better method of treating colds, the demand for Vicks increases year after year. Only a short time ago the famous slogan, "Over 17 Million Jars Used Yearly," was raised to "21 Million" to keep step with this demand. These figures, too, have been outgrown, as there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly"—a jar for every family in the United States.

Over-Caution

If you hesitate to give your order, the crooked stock salesman will browbeat, flatter, sneer at you—do all he can to shame you into giving him your money. For every person who has lost through too much care, hundreds have suffered through too little. Ask your visiting salesman to call on your banker with you—telephone to your Better Business Bureau while he's there. If his offer is honest, he can offer no objection. If it is not, his assurance will wilt like a hard collar on a summer's day. You can't be too cautious in buying stock.

MRS. CURLEY, ILL AT HOME, HEARS INAUGURAL OVER THE RADIO

HUGE CROWD SEES MAYOR TAKE OATH

Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, Gen Clarence R. Edwards, Maj. Gen Edward L. Logan, Sherman L. Whipple, State Adj. Wilfred A. Wetherby of the G. A. R., two officers of the state command and David H. Whelton, at one time acting mayor of the city.

The processional, "March Militaire," was played on the organ by John A. O'Shea. Then the People's Symphony Orchestra, directed by William Dodge, accompanied Marie Murray, contralto, in "America," while the crowd stood.

Fr. Kelly offered invocation and City Clerk Doyle then read the certificate of election.

His right hand uplifted, his subdued voice directed partly into the microphone, Mr. Curley took the oath of mayoralty from Chief Justice Rugg. The first sustained applause followed.

COUNCIL SWORN IN

After the oath, the orchestra played an "American Fantasia," and included in it was the tune of "The Girl I Left Behind Me." It was not played intentionally; it just happened to be included in the airs. The audience sought Mr. Curley's eyes and Mr. Curley's eyes were above and beyond them.

City Clerk Doyle then read the certificates of election of the council members and the new mayor administered to them the oath of their office. New councilmen taking the oath were:

Lawrence Curtis, 2d, Richard D. Gleason, Leo F. Power, Edward L. Englert, Joseph McGrath, Francis E. Kelly, Clement A. Norton, Joseph A. Cox and James Heim.

Following another selection by the orchestra, Mr. Curley stepped to the microphone, greeted the assemblage and sent his message to his wife.

He then passed into his inaugural address and soon had the crowd, as he always has them, intent upon every word of his message.

Outside the building several thousand people, unable to get into the hall, had gathered on the St. Stephen st. side. Amplifiers carried his address to the overflow.

SCORES OF TRIBUTES

A detail of police kept the crowd from interfering with traffic. Inside the hall another force moved constantly through the aisles, keeping them clear of about 2000 men and women for whom there were no seats.

At the conclusion of the program the mayor and the children went home while the official party went to City Hall. Mrs. Curley informed the family she had heard every word of the exercises almost as clearly as if she had been present.

Scores of telegrams and floral tributes were received during the day at the Jamesaway house. Because of Mrs. Curley's illness, the customary inaugural dinner will not be held there tonight.

First Absence

Mrs. James M. Curley, whose illness forced her to listen in by radio to her husband's inauguration as mayor today. It was her first absence from his inaugurals.

Carriere Wants New Fitchburg City Hall

Fitchburg, Jan. 6—Construction of a new City hall, and a fire alarm signal and repair building was among recommendations in the inaugural address of Mayor Joseph N Carriere in the City Auditorium today.

Springfield Mayor Dwells on Unemployment

Springfield, Jan. 6 (AP)—Dwight R. Winter today took the oath of office as the first Democratic mayor of Springfield in 17 years.

His message recommended careful consideration of the unemployment problem in compliance with the federal government's request to aid in co-operative adjustment of economic conditions and suggested expenditures undertaken to solve this problem be along lines that will give greatest return and produce greatest amount of employment.

He stressed that every consideration be given to industrial development and suggested an industrial exhibition to further knowledge of the city's varied manufactured products.

City Women Support Many, Probers Find

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—A bulletin issued by the U. S. Women's Bureau says that a large proportion of families living in cities depend largely upon the earnings of women, and in many homes the entire income is earned by wife or daughters.

LYNCH ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CITY COUNCIL

Maj. William G. Lynch of South Boston was today elected president of the City Council for 1930 on the fifth ballot.

The election was held at City Hall immediately after the inauguration ceremonies at Symphony hall and, except for the passage of one order, was the only business considered by the new council at the first session.

On the first ballot Councillor Edward M. Gallagher received 11 votes, with 12 necessary for a choice. He held this figure for the next two ballots, when Councillor Dowd announced his switch to Lynch.

Through the three ballots Councillor John I. Fitzgerald had nine votes. Councillor Robert Gardiner Wilson was voting for Councillor Herman L. Bush and Councillor Peter A. Murray for Councillor Joseph P. Cox.

On the fourth ballot Lynch had 10 votes. Bush then announced a shift from Wilson to Lynch and Murray shifted likewise. The vote then was made unanimous.

The one order passed was introduced by Councillor Thomas H. Green of Charlestown and requested Mayor Curley to ask President Hoover to intercede with Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams to have some warship assigned to Boston Navy Yard for construction repairs.

It was introduced in an attempt to block the discharge of several hundred navy yard employes.

After the meeting the councillors were guests of Mayor Curley at a banquet in the Parker House.

as the new mayor was inducted into office.

Although the mayor said he had requested resignations of eight members of the Nichols executive family, he gave no names.

It is understood at City Hall, however, that the axe sufferers include Fire Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, Corporation Counsel Frank S. Deland, Traffic Commissioner William Fisher, City Collector George H. Johnson, Soldiers' Relief Commissioner John W. Reth, one member of the board of assessors and one member of the transit board.

The mayor has yet to make public the name of his personal secretary, but Arthur B. Corbett has been appointed first assistant secretary. The new chief clerk is Cornelius A. Reardon, and other secretaries include Joseph Hanlon, John H. Sullivan and Frank Howland. John M. Casey is chief of the licensing board, continuing, and Miss Alice Leonard is official telephone operator.

'Bossy' Gillis Again Takes Mayor's Oath

Newburyport, Jan. 6—The city government of 1930 was ushered in this morning at 10 o'clock when Andrew J. Gillis was once again sworn in as the chief executive for a two-year term.

The council assembled in the chamber at City Hall, where the oath of office was administered to the Mayor by City Clerk Henry W Little, who also administered the oath to Councillors-at-large Warren S. Currier, William Peebles, Edward G. Perkins, Eugene Twomey and Moses E. Wright.

The ward councillors, elected in 1928 were likewise present as follows: Ward 1, James W. Ryan; Ward 2, Edward Rass; Ward 3, William P. Carlin; Ward 4, Arthur J. Smith; Ward 5, Timothy R. Leary; Ward 6, Harold F. McWilliams.

The Rev. Father Dunn of the Church of the Immaculate Conception delivered the invocation.

Enrolments in the Spring Classes From Afar

EACH mail brings Martha Lee scores of letters from girls and women anxious to enroll in the mid-winter cooking classes. But alas and alack, these have been filled for many days past.

We even have quite a heavy enrolment for our Spring classes which open on April 1 and will cover a two months' period. We only wish our walls were elastic enough to accommodate every one who wants to take advantage of these popular and valuable complimentary cooking classes.

It certainly goes to prove what Martha Lee has always contended, that modern women are just as interested in the art of cookery as were their grandmothers. To be sure, they have no idea of working from "sun to sun" in their kitchens, but they are alive to the importance of homemaking as a real profession and on the alert for all that's new and helpful in home economics.

Martha Lee's first aim in establishing these cooking classes was to provide practical information and reliable recipes that would make home cooking less of a problem and more of a pleasure. And the kind things that all New England seems to be saying about these classes makes it appear that she has succeeded.

Women flock from all over New England to take advantage of these classes. And they come from all walks of life. One of our frequent visitors is the wife of a state senator, another the widow of a former ambassador to Venezuela. Another is the principal of a famous cooking school. And as you know, we have quite a fascinating flock of home economics teachers from both public and private schools. Martha Lee is especially proud of her business girls and the novice homemakers who are starting out with such enthusiasm and she observes, good common sense. And then there is a regular army or more experienced housekeepers who are rightly called "the backbone of the nation."

Over 36,000 of these wide awake girls and women are enrolled in the Martha Lee Women's Club—a fast growing organization of New England women with a platform of "To Better Our Lives"—especially our home lives. There are no dues or obligations of any kind in joining this club. Simply a desire to help and be helped, through an exchange of ideas on homemaking problems. A membership with registered number is freely yours on request to Martha Lee by letter. And you'll find that your card entitles you from time to time to various privileges such as lesson sheets remaining from cooking classes, attendance at special demonstrations, etc. If you haven't secured your card, why not write for it today?

Mrs. Gertrude Milligan is the woman who takes the award today for the best recipe. She offers a "Delight Bread Pudding," and Martha Lee agrees that it is something that all women should know about, and that all who eat should meet.

From Watch Tower

HERE'S wishing that the good resolutions you have made for careful household budgeting will help make your New Year prosperous and happy. Since 40 per cent of the average family income is spent for food, the happiness and welfare of the family naturally depends much on intelligence and careful food buying.

I hope that my weekly report from the Market Watch Tower is truly helpful in keeping you informed of market conditions, plentiful supplies which means low prices, local seasons and new arrivals.

This week, carrots, cabbage, celery and onions are in liberal supply and therefore reasonable, and California broccoli is plentiful and comparatively low priced at 15c to 20c a pound. (Would you like some broccoli recipes?) Potatoes that not to be recommended to the faithful budgeter, perhaps, are the small bunches of Ohio asparagus which have appeared at 19c a bunch.

Florida strawberries are on the luxury list, too, but extraordinary good and reasonable for this time of year at 49c to 69c a quart. Bananas are cheap and lemons are lower.

Fresh pork (New England dressed fresh pork, of course) and the stew cuts of beef are economical buys and poultry prices are still reasonable. Fresh fish prices show an upward tendency.

Haddock spawn is quite plentiful and the best of it is selling at 30c a pound. Massachusetts Special Eggs are retailing for 75c to 85c.

CORRECTION IN PRIZE RAVIOLI RECIPE

Mrs. James J. Bacigalupo, of 221 Salem st., Boston, calls our attention to a typographical mistake in our prize winning Ravioli recipe published in this paper Monday, December 30. In the directions for preparing the spinach, "soak the spinach" should be "cook the spinach for 15 minutes, cool, squeeze dry and chop fine."

The rest of the recipe is correct and we hope that you will have as good luck with it as we have.

PUFFED CRACKERS IN SOUPS

One of the most interesting and inexpensive accompaniments for the soup course are crushed puffed crackers. And easy to make, too. Simply split old-fashioned thick soda crackers and soak in ice water for five minutes. Remove from water, drain thoroughly and place in a baking pan. Dot each cracker half generously with butter and bake in a hot oven until crust is brown—from 10 minutes to a half-hour usually.

Soap Should Be Melted

ONE thing I have learned from the charming visiting demonstrators from one of the world's largest soap concerns located in Cambridge—and that is the importance of dissolving soap powder and soap flakes into solutions before using.

I've seen so many people put their clothes into the soaking water and then sprinkle the dry soap powder or flakes over them or possibly just sprinkle the powder into the lukewarm water before putting the clothes in. Both ways are incorrect. The flakes or powders should be entirely dissolved in boiling water and then diluted with cold water to the desired temperature. Only in this way can they do the splendid work they will for you if given the opportunity.

$1800 for Federation Forests

AT the meeting of the executive board of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. James M. McGann, one of the trustees of the district forest of the fourteenth and fifteenth districts, offered the State Federation the sum of $1800 as the gift of these districts to the Federation Forest, now being sponsored by the State Department of Conservation, of which Mrs. Daniel M. Goodridge is chairman. It was voted to accept the gift.

The gift is subject to the following conditions:

The part of the State Federation Forest purchased with this gift shall be marked by a tablet bearing a brief history of the district forest, and a statement of its dedication to Mrs. Arthur Devens Potter and Mrs. Axel A. Packard, state presidents from these districts, the expense of this tablet to be met from the gift. Also, the book of archives or records of this project and the list of contributing clubs shall be kept at the Federation headquarters in Boston.

A reference to this gift shall be incorporated in the inscription on the main tablet marking the State Federation Forest.

This offer must be accepted, the money raised for the State Federation Forest, and the state signify its acceptance of the same within three years from the date of this offer.

Not as a condition, but as a request, the clubs express their very strong desire that the State Federation Forest be located somewhere within the limits of their districts.

On motion of Mrs. Goodridge, state chairman of conservation, the executive board of the State Federation voted unanimously to accept this most generous gift, which will undoubtedly give fresh impetus to the movement for a State Federation Forest.

Mrs. C. Ralph Taylor, chairman of the education committee of the West Roxbury Woman's Club, announces the annual local scholarship of $200 for the further education of some girl living in the West Roxbury postal district. As there is no high school in this district applications are invited through the principals of the various high schools of Boston proper, Roxbury and Jamaica Plain, where the West Roxbury students attend. The scholarship is given outright.

Mrs. Roberta B. Forgie, legislative chairman, reserved seats for 25 club members to be present at the opening of the supreme judicial court today.

The drama group will meet at 2 p. m. Wednesday to work on three one-act plays in preparation for a public performance in the near future. They are also rehearsing for the annual play in February. Miss Ervine Cowlishaw is coaching.

PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S CLUB

Mrs. Mabel Mann Jordan, president, announces that the first meeting of the new year is to take place tomorrow night at 8 p. m. in the Georgian room, Hotel Statler, with a reception to new members. It is in charge of the friendship committee of which Mabel Fisk Barstow is chairman. Many new members who have entered the club since March, 1929, are to be the guests of honor.

An elaborate program, in charge of Mrs. M. H. Guiesian, includes songs by Greta Melos, soprano, accompanied by Gladys G. Miller. Miss Miller, contralto, will also render a group of songs. Susan Bartlett, who has spent many years in China, will appear in costume and will speak on "Chinese Culture" and read from her Chinese play "Tang Kuei Fei." Refreshments will be served and the meeting is open to guests. Mrs. Barstow requires the members of the committee to wear a green ribbon on their right arm that new members and guests might be aided in meeting each other.

On January 8, from Station WEEI at 4:20, Mrs. Charles H. Ferguson, chairman of broadcasts, announces Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, who will give a New Year's greeting; Mrs. M. Frances Brady, speaker; Ethel Walcott Rees, soprano; Gladys Childs Miller, contralto; Ruloh Robinson, tenor, guest artist; Alice Allen Drayton, pianist.

Roxbury Woman Wins $5 Prize in Contest

"PATIENCE is a virtue," we used to write in our copy books, and it certainly has proved so in the case of Mrs. Gertrude Milligan of 40 Vine st., Roxbury, Mass. Ever since our weekly $5 recipe prize contest started Mrs. Milligan has faithfully sent in carefully written and accurate recipes, but, unfortunately, many of them have been duplicated, as is the case with hundreds of others received each week.

This week, however, we are very glad indeed to award the $5 cash prize to Mrs. Milligan for her "Delight Bread Pudding." Not only does this meet the conditions of including in its ingredients one or more of the food products advertised in this paper, but it is easily made, not too extravagant, and yet quite different from the plain everyday kind of bread puddings.

Here's the recipe:

DELIGHT BREAD PUDDING

1 tsp. baking soda (Arm and Hammer)

1 pkg. of dates (10 ounces Dromedary)

1 cup boiling water

½ cup butter (Hood's) or Crisco

½ cup brown sugar (Domino)

2 eggs (Hood's) well beaten

1 cup flour (Ceresota) sifted

½ cup chopped walnut meats

3 cups bread crumbs

Sprinkle the soda over the dates, add the water and let stand until cold. Cream the shortening thoroughly, add the sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add the eggs, date mixture, flour, nuts and bread crumbs. Beat thoroughly and pour into 1 greased mold or 3 one-pound baking powder cans. Fill the cans 2-3 full and cover tight. Steam for 2 hours or bake in a greased baking dish, covered, in a moderate oven 20 minutes, then uncover and bake 25 minutes longer. Serve with the following sauce:

2 tbsps. butter (Hood's)

1 cup powdered sugar (Domino)

1 egg separated (Hood's)

1 tsp. vanilla (Burnett's)

Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, and beat thoroughly. Add the egg yolk and flavoring, then fold in the beaten egg white.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

DRIVING OUT ADVERSE ENTRY

Declarer's plan of play is frequently influenced by what must be an adverse bidder's side compensation and therefore side entry for a suit adversely bid. The situation is not at all uncommon where Declarer cannot possibly go game should he fail to drive out this marked side entry while still holding a stopper in the suit opened, but can go game should he do so. The above hand is a good example of this situation.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: Following South's original bid of one Spade, West bids one No Trump and all pass.

Contract: As in Auction, South starts with one Spade, which West overcalls with two No Trumps. It is rare indeed that this situation arises where a player following an original suit bid holds the sound requirements for an overcall of two No Trumps. The situation presented is one in which practically all of the high card values are marked as massed in two hands of Dealer and West. Consequently, West, with an original two No Trump bid (had Dealer passed) should make quick overcall of Dealer's one Spade when holding double stoppers in that suit, to force a response from partner should he hold any supporting values whatsoever. North passing, East withholding immediate values in the shape of two Queens and a Jack-Ten bids three No Trumps as his best response to West's demand.

Salient Points of Play

North opens the Ten of Spades, the top of three cards of the suit named by partner which South lets run to Declarer's Jack. As previously stated, the Declarer's plan of play is governed primarily by the count of his own and Dummy's hands. Starting with the suit opened, Declarer can count as positive winners two Spades, three Diamonds and three Club tricks, or eight in all before his remaining stopper in Spades is driven out, that is always assuming that the Club finesse may lose. Consequently, Declarer's problem is how best to assure the needed ninth trick for game. This must of course be the establishment of a Heart trick in case the Club finesse loses.

Auction Bidding

	1st Rd.	2nd Rd.
South	1 ♠	Pass
West	2 N T	Pass
North	Pass	Pass
East	3 N T

Contract Bidding

	1st Rd.	2nd Rd.
North	Pass	Pass
East	3 N T

If the Club finesse loses another Spade will be led and Declarer's Ace driven out, following which it will be all too late to establish a Heart trick. Consequently, Declarer's plan of play is to establish his Heart trick at once, particularly as the Ace is particularly marked as held by South to justify his original Spade bid. Following this, the partner should be put in second round of Spades and win with the third, in order that he may safely finesse the Club. So plan, Declarer must make his contract.

Mr. Whitehead will answer one question at a time from readers, by letter prepaid. Write to him, care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope.

'FIREWORKS' IN BRADEN'S INAUGURAL

Lowell, Jan. 6—Mayor Thomas H. Braden and the 1930 City Council of 1930 were inducted into office this forenoon at simple exercises in the council chamber in City Hall.

The new councilors to whom the oath of office was administered are Robert R. Thomas, John B. Caddell, Edgar M. Kent and Walter S. Connor.

The mayor's inaugural address featured the inauguration ceremony and came up to the expectancy of his friends in "fireworks"—the sewer, water and health forces coming in for sharp comment, and the activities of illicit liquor dealers also drawing fire.

As to the bootlegging establishments, the mayor stated that he is protecting no one. "If smoke shops and so-called 'hippers' continue to flourish, the mayor will call in the proper authorities to put an immediate stop to this illegal practice. No man has the right to offer 'protection' to any lawbreaker in the name of the mayor, although I have heard it rumored that this is being done.

Judge Arthur L. Eno, associate justice of the district court, administered the oath of office first to the mayor and then to the members of the Council.

The Rev. John Henry Sargent, pastor of the Highland M. E. Church, delivered the invocation.

Says Police Must Keep Out of Politics

Worcester, Jan. 6—Police officials must keep out of city politics and devote their attention to "keeping the city clean," was the ultimatum laid down by Mayor Michael J. O'Hara, who was inaugurated today for his fifth term.

Nearly 700 people saw Judge Frank L. Riley of the Central District Court administer the oath of office to the mayor. The executive in turn swore in the council and school committee members.

Landers Sworn in at Lawrence Inaugural

Lawrence, Jan. 6—Three members of Lawrence's city government were officially returned to office for two-year terms this morning at the inaugural exercises held before a large assembly in the auditorium of the Oliver Grammar School on Haverhill st.

Mayor Michael A. Landers took the oath of office for the second time from City Clerk John D. Daley. Alderman Peter Carr took oath of office from the third consecutive term as director of the department of public safety.

Alderman John W. McCarthy, director of engineering, was inaugurated for his second consecutive term in that office.

The inaugural address was given by Mayor Landers and the prayer at the opening of the inaugural offered by the Rev. John T. Sheehan, J. C. D., O. S. A., pastor of St. Lawrence's Church.

Former Boston Minister Is Dead

Bradford, Pa., Jan. 5 (AP)—The Rev. Dr. R. S. Mooney, 66, First Universalist minister, died last night after a brief illness. He had served pastorates at Boston, Providence, R. I., Portland, Me., and other cities. Recently he accepted a call to Amesbury, Mass., and was to have left for that city Wednesday, when he became ill. He was nationally known as a writer and authority on the Universal Church.

AUSTRIA BALKS AT PARLEY ON REPARATIONS

The Hague, Jan. 6 (AP)—Private negotiations at the reparations conference between the Austrians and smaller reparations creditors thus far have failed.

Chancellor Schober of Austria told the non-German reparations committee the negotiations had been unavailing because Austria could not possibly pay the sums expected from her.

Dr. Eduard Benes, Chechoslovakian minister of foreign affairs, and George G. Mironescu, Rumanian minister of foreign affairs, nevertheless expressed optimism and asked that the negotiations continue.

One of the main problems keeping the chief delegates busy concerns the date of payments by Germany. The Germans demand that payments be calculated from the end of the month rather than from the first or 15th. Finance Minister Moldenhauer said the Reich could not afford the loss in interest on such payments.

Determination of conference leaders that outstanding problems be settled quickly was indicated when Foreign Minister Briand of France announced he would leave Friday for Geneva where the Council of the League of Nations will meet Jan. 13.

Church May Scorn $10,000 for Service

Milford, Ct., Jan. 6 (INS)—Whether to take Francis P. Garvin's $10,000 or to keep an ancient communion service is the problem members of the First Congregational Church here will attempt to decide Wednesday evening. Mr. Garvin wants to buy the silver to add to his great collection of early American items now displayed in the art galleries at Yale.

Members of the church were swamped with protests from all over the country. Most of the letters indicated that sale of the silver communion services would be in the nature of a sacrilege.

Venizelos "Talks" to Greeks in U. S.

Athens, Jan. 6 (AP)—Premier Venizelos has given a phonographic message to American Greeks.

He urges concord. "Don't transfer your differences to the New World, but work in the consciousness that you come from a Greece which was not demoralized by disaster but is a morally united Hellenic republic, advancing firmly toward prosperity. I beg you never to forget your motherland."

His Cuss Words Cost Him $1.17 Under Law Passed in 1774

Bradford, Pa., Jan. 6 (AP)—When Lowell Osborne, 17, Bradford, was brought before Alderman Harry Collins charged with using profanity in addressing a woman, the magistrate delved into some musty books, dug up a state statute of 1774 and discovered Lowell had passed $1.17 worth.

Ordinary swear words are punishable by a 40 cent fine and mention of the Diety 67 cents, the law specified.

Osborne paid the fine, which, as the law provides, was turned over to the poor department.

HUNT HEIRS OF MEHL FORTUNE

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—Relatives of John W. Mehl, Brooklyn real estate dealer who disappeared April 29, 1926, and was believed by police to have been slain in a plot to get his $400,000 fortune, were being sought today in an effort to determine definitely the identity of a skeleton found in the sand of Bush Meadows Brooklyn.

Two boys, shooting muskrats found the skeleton in the marshes. Police said the black shoes found with the bones answered a description of those worn by Mehl, as did fragments of black clothing, and that one of teeth was of gold, such as the missing man had.

The skeleton was found about the vicinity where Brooklyn police excavated, with a steam shovel several years ago in their search for the missing real estate man.

Police today had found that a sister and a niece of the missing man had moved in recent years and an effort is being made to locate them to identify the skeleton definitely.

NEW RAZOR IS PERFECTED BY GILLETTE CO.

The South Boston factory of the Gillette Safety Razor Co. was like an armed camp today. A new razor was born. A new style of blade was brought out.

Announcement was made to upwards of 200 officers, managers and salesmen, brought in from all over the world, but the utmost secrecy is maintained as to the character of the new products.

Everybody going into the plant had to be identified. Guards were posted at every entrance.

Exactly at 12 o'clock, noon, every wheel in the big plant ceased turning. With that moment the life of the famous old Gillette came to an end. A pretty young lady in the final assembly room, Miss Arline Avola, took the last razor—the 115,272,539th made by the company—and presented it to Frank J. Fahey vice-president and general manager, who is to have it mounted and given the place of honor in his razor museum.

The salesmen's convention will continue until Wednesday night, closing with a banquet at the Algonquin Club. Afterwards the company's representatives will scatter to the far corners of the earth to "sell" the new products, which will be available in about six weeks.

TWO FOUND SHORT CUT TO COUGH RELIEF

MARY MAY

REM also helps third in family

After Mary May of 501 Coffey St., Indianapolis had the flu, a bad cough still bothered her. But both her father and her brother had themselves had experience in getting rid of a cough, and knew what to do. They had both used REM and, as Mr. May says, "We are all great believers in it." So father bought a new bottle of REM at Withers' Pharmacy on Oliver Ave., near Warren, and a third member of the May family soon learned how quickly REM brings its soothing relief. Another thing she also learned was that REM isn't unpleasant to take. It hasn't that nasty taste that makes children dread "medicine time." Mothers and fathers can appreciate that!

REM is quicker. Clings to the throat. Starts relief immediately

REM's easy to take, too. Children and parents can both appreciate that

REM quickly spreads a soothing, healing film over irritated throats

... on the skis it's BALANCE!

... in a cigarette TASTE!

IT is a curious fact that the best-tasting cigarette is the one in which no single taste quality is too evident. Over-mildness, for example—or over-richness—shows lack of "balance" just as plainly as harshness or bitterness.

On this basis, test Chesterfield. Aroma, smoothness, satisfying goodness, flavor, mildness, all present—but none emphasized at the expense of others. The one goal is taste—better taste, balanced taste—

"TASTE above everything"

MILD, yes . . . and yet THEY SATISFY

PROGRAMS FOR TODAY, TONIGHT ON THE RADIO

By THE RADIO EDITOR

IF MUSICIANS governed the destinies of the nation, or had any real hand in making its laws and interdictions, they would probably pass a prompt prohibitory amendment forbidding librettists the use of the word "aren't" in song lyrics. There's hardly a word in the four or five hundred making up our current vocabulary which fits in so poorly with melody. No matter how bad the tune, you can sound a fairly dramatic tones worse by introducing that troublesome monosyllable. Every section of the land has its own pronunciation and every one is bad. Whether the singer sings "arrunt" as in Tin Pan Alley, "arent," a la Boston, "awnt," a la Hollywood, or makes a strangling effort to get a nasal "R" into the difficult place, the result is calamitous at best. Happily "Aren't We All" will soon go the way of Edna Barrymore's "There Isn't Any More," and conditions will be greatly ameliorated.

CECIL AND SALLY, a new comic strip of the air, will become a regular daily feature of stations WNAC and WEAF, commencing today at 4:45 p.m. It is a popular Pacific coast program, now released nationally by means of electrical reproductions. Cecil is a bashful boy of 20. Sally is a girl with thousands of questions, a giggle and a lisp.

HAROLD VAN DUZEE will be the featured tenor soloist when Roxy and His Gang broadcast through WEZ and the NBC System at 8 tonight.

THE OLDEST known folk song of Russia is the theme of the Andante Cantabile from Tschaikowsky's String Quartet, Opus II, which will be a highlight in the program presented over WEAF and the NBC System by Harry Horlick's A. and P. Gypsies at 8:30. The program follows: "Les Bas-derilleros" (Voipati); "Who Can Tell?" (Kreisler), string sextet; "Down You Away" (Herbert), soprano solo; "Nena" (Casamor), Un Sonnet d'Amour (Coleridge-Taylor); "Rabbouni Chinoi" (Kreisler); Andante Cantabile (Tschaikowsky); Spanish Dance No. 5 (Moszkowski); Hominka (del Riego); soprano solo; Medley of Old Songs; "I'm a Wild Rose" (MacDowell); "Gloria"; Salvonia Dance (Glazounow).

EVENING IN PARIS depicts Manon, Peaches, Bill, and Jacques, at Manton, on the French Riviera, seated high up on the hill overlooking the city, in the typical old restaurant. The musical program heard over WNAC and Columbia stations at 8:30 will include the singing of the Shadow Song from "Dinorah," by Irma deBaun, coloratura soprano; Ludovic Casitlla at tenor, will sing "O Del Mio Amato Ben." A 15th century melody of Donaudy will be heard as a contralto solo by Delphine March. Taylor Buckley, otherwise the "Bill" of the group, will give that great contribution to the operatic repertory, "The Spaniard Who Blighted My Life," at first sung by none other than the great Al Jolson. There will be a group of selections for the orchestra and a tarantelle played by Enriuq Madrigures, first violinist for the orchestra.

BERLIOZ' overture, "Carnaval Romain," from his opera, "Benvenuto Cellini," will be played by the Radio Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Guy Fraser Harrison in the Stromberg-Carlson hour sent from Rochester over WEZ and the NBC System at 10 o'clock. Lucile Johnson Rigsby, harpist, will play Liszt's "Liebestraum" as a harp solo. Other numbers by the orchestra are Village Dance, by Chabrier, and Triumphal March, from "Aida," by Verdi.

THE Robert Burns Panatela-Guy Lombardo Orchestra broadcast over WNAC and the Yankee Network at 10 o'clock will present a collection of popular numbers. The Frohne Sisters will sing their numbers in the following program: "I Love You Truly," "In a Texas Moon," "Just You, Just Me," Frohne Sisters; "Cryin' for the Carolines," "Miss Wonderful," "Oh Baby, Look What You've Done to Me," Frohne Sisters; "Hello, Baby," "Have a Little Faith in Me."

TWO ORCHESTRAS, the Cathedral Choir, a male chorus, a quartet, a trio, Helen Oelheim, contralto, and John Barclay, baritone, make up the Voice of Columbia broadcast from WNAC and stations of the Columbia System at 10:30. Works of Wagner, Delibes, Rimsky-Korsakoff and other great composers vie with present day rhythms. The complete program follows:

"Hail Bright Abode," from "Tannhauser" (Wagner), chorus and orchestra; "Congratulations," orchestra and quartet; contralto solo, "Thy Beaming Eyes" (MacDowell), Helen Oelheim; scherzo from the incidental music to "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn); "Am I a Passing Fancy?" orchestra and quartet; baritone solo, "Boots, Saddle, to Horse and Away" (Stanford), John Barclay, male chorus and orchestra; "Marche Joyeuse" (Chabrier) orchestra; "Can't We Be Friends?" orchestra and quartet; "Sing, Nightingale, Sing" (Kiertzner), soprano and male chorus; "Piccolo Pete," novelty, male quartet; Cortege de Bacchus from the Ballet "Sylvia" (Delibes), orchestra; Sweet Adaline Medley, orchestra and quartet; Tale of the Kalandar Prince from "Scheherazade" (Rimsky-Korsakoff), orchestra; chorus, Silent Heroes from Act II, "The Chimes of Normandy" (Planquette), baritone solo, chorus and orchestra.

Two Very Good Reasons

why you should visit Silver's Specialty Shop this week, are—first of all their wonderful coats—and then their dresses! The Silvers are discontinuing certain of their coats, and if you can wear a style in size from 14 to 38 you are most fortunate, for some of the most beautiful fur trimmed winter coats I have seen are reduced to $35 and $45. They originally sold at a penny less than $69 and $89. A group of stunning dresses in both extreme and modified silhouette styles (originally $16.50 to $24.50) are reduced to $10.50. Here's a bargain corner contains the styles that many prefer, priced at $3. Silver's Specialty Shop, 89 Temple Place, 5th floor.

Evelyn's Anniversary Sale, $6.95

Chiffons dotted with rhinestones, and elaborate sleeve trimmings. All the gorgeous new high shades in flat crepe; frisky prints, taffeta and satin evening gowns are priced from $6.95 to $12.95 up. Roll Up Your Rugs!

Oh, not for dancing, my—but for shampooing! This is the best time of the year to have your rugs cleansed, for the Golden Bell Cleansers, who do such fine rug work, offer special prices: $1.61 for 8.3x10.6 Domestic; $3.24 for 9x12, and 5 cents a square foot for Oriental. Golden Bell Cleansers are most reliable, and when you send your rugs to them you can be assured that they will return them renewed to original freshness, cleanliness and beauty; colors brightened; nap fluffed up; and the "life" restored. Figure Beautifiers!

Your figure does not belong exclusively to you. Think of those who look at you! A million dollar gown betrays poor corestry—a wrong apron reveals good corestry. The Crayco Correct Corsetry can greatly improve the figure, and keeps a normal figure normal. Figure Analyzer—no elastic webbing is used. Adjustable clasps on each side mold the figure to correct lines. So few women can procure satisfactory readymades. Caparn builds for the individual. Hips and abdomen smooth away. You may see a garment designed especially for you on your body before ordering. No more expensive than readymades. Call and see models. Caparn, 324 Boylston St., Ken. 4230. 110 Tremont St., Lib. 6649.

Puff Sleeves—Capelets

boleros—net trimmings! What a trial change in fashions, Anne! Naturally, when you hear these style details you picture a high price tag—

If you want to be first in the new fashions you can be—for only $10. What Do Little Eskimos Do to keep their skin from chapping? You never thought of that before, did you, Anne? Well, I have it quite confidentially that before stepping out of their snug little igloos Eskimo debs give their skin a thorough oiling! And who ever saw an Eskimo with chapped skin? But we have much more to contend with in winter than frosty air. We have steam-heated homes that have a most drying effect upon our complexion and hair. And Miss Helen Louise Fox, of the Princess House, who is visiting Filene's all this week, has selected five "winter preparations" that will keep your skin oily enough to withstand any change in temperature. The wonderful Primrose Smoothskin Oil ($1.50) the only oil of its kind that can be used all over the body, can be massaged into the hair with wonderful results and keeps the fingernails and cuticle from becoming brittle. Their Nourishing Cream ($2.50) is a real skin food to feed the tissues. Miss Fox suggests cream rouge, too, as it contributes its share of oil—and gives a natural tinge of color. Primrose Hand Lotion ($1.25), a wonderful protector, keeps the hands soft, white and satin-smooth. Every skin needs animating, and Primrose Circulation Cream ($2) left on for five minutes brings a healthy rush of blood to the skin surface that sets it tingling and glowing. Miss Fox will be in Filene's Toilet Goods Section (street floor) all this week. Take your chapping troubles to her. She can help you wonderfully.

There Are a Few Things that we talk about only when we are among friends, Anne! And one of them is superfluous hair. Now me, I never cry when I see the fair, smooth skin of a pretty face marred by such an unlovely growth, when the most effective way of removing it permanently is so simple. A treatment with Miss Elizabeth Sparkes, electric needle specialist, is really a pleasure—for you may relax while her deft fingers and electric needle remove every trace of hairgrowth. Miss Sparkes has had long years of experience and has many delighted patrons to vouch that her treatments are successful and painless. Miss Sparkes is at 120 Tremont St., Rm. 334. Tel. Han. 7592.

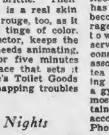
were made for dancing—for beauty and bright lights, Anne —so you could be more welcome than the Diamond Jubilee



Beauty Special which Gilchrist's Beauty Salon offers the first three days of this week! The Special is a shampoo-and-wave combination for $1.50—a regular $2 value. Gilchrist's operators are noted for their artistry—and their scampoos wake up your scalp—set it tingling with life, and impart a satin sheen to your hair. Their waves—your choice of marcel or comb—are soft, caressing ripples of beauty. For appointment for a Diamond Jubilee Special, call Lib. 9700.

It's Mendelsohn's January Clearance Sale of all their party frocks, and there are some adorable ones in rainbow colors. Taffetas, shimmery satins, tulle and lace. It's the wise little miss who watches for Mendelsohn's sales that always "wears a different dress to every party." They also have lovely white bridal gowns and veils (new or used) for sale and rent; bridesmaids' outfits, evening gowns and wraps. Mendelsohn's Dress Shop, 59 Temple Place, 5th floor.

SCREEN 'PARIS' LIFTS IRENE BORDONI TO NEW HEIGHTS OF STARDOM

ABLE CAST IN KEITH FILM

The Cast

Vivienne Rolland	Irene Bordoni
Guy Fenwell	Jack Buchanan
Coral Sabbot	Louise Closser Hale
Andrew Sabbot	James Rennie
Brenda Kaley	Margaret Fielding
Harriet	Zasu Pitts

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

If the purpose of the theater be to amuse, then "Paris" serves this purpose to the extent of 100 per cent. In its 100 minutes on the screen at the New B. F. Keith's this week, it fairly crams in entertainment by the eyeful and the earful; it has beauty, it has laughs galore, and best of all, it has acting that is well nigh perfect. Great as she is, Irene Bordoni isn't the whole show by any means; she has the ablest sort of assistance.

Here is a show that should pack them in at every performance. Originally a stage play and a lively one, the movie actualy adds much and Miss Bordoni is so well pictured and does her share of the work so superbly that she becomes one of the refreshingly brilliant film "finds." She has personality; the memory of Maurice Chevalier forces itself upon the auditor as he sits and sees. These two Parisians aren't limited by language; they could speak Chinese and still be accounted intelligible to folks who understood not a word they said. But the talent isn't limited to Miss Bordoni; she has stellar aides in Louise Closser Hale, well-remembered old-stager, and Jack Buchanan, who may be recorded as the most promising English-speaking acquisition by Hollywood in many months.

No less a locality than Newton Centre gets its place in the motion picture sun in "Paris." It is the home of Andrew Sabbot (Jason Robards), and again and again it is mentioned in the unfolding of the sprightly tale.

So good are Miss Hale and Mr. Buchanan that often they give Miss Bordoni a close race for the honors; they almost "steal the show." Which is high praise.

HOLDING HANDS often means something and it does in this case. Love is in the background. Miss Bordoni portrays the musical comedy star in "Paris" on the screen at the New B. F. Keith's.

BALLET MAIN OPERA PART

The Chicago Civic Opera Ballet shows promise of being the most interesting and vital ever presented here by the Chicago Civic Opera Company. For during its present season in Chicago, the ballet has received no small amount of praise, and has always stood out the interpretations of the two principals whose lives have been so differently spent while engaged in the same art.

The premiere danseuse is Ruth Pryor, who has been dancing since she was nine. At 14 she was embarked on a career which carried her over the Orpheum and Keith circuits. From vaudeville she became a featured dancer in musical comedy and stepped into a place as soloist with the Chicago Civic Opera Ballet last season.

The premier danseur, Edward Canton, has had an interesting career. His parents determined upon Russia as the spot where they would spend their honeymoon and immediately following their wedding in America, departed for that country. While there, Canton's father was offered a position in charge of the Czar's famous racing stables. He accepted, and settled with his bride in Moscow. There Edward Canton was born and there he received his early training

"LOST ZEPP" HELD OVER

So great has been the popularity of the Tiffany all-talking, "The Lost Zeppelin," at the Park that the management decided to continue it for a second week. The attendance has been nothing short of phenomenal. From the start a week ago there has been no time from morning until night that the theater has not only filled to its capacity, but the available standing room has been taxed to its utmost.

Through the photoplay is woven an absorbing love romance between Comdr. Hall (played by Conway Tearle), his aide, Tom Armstrong (played by Ricardo Cortez), and Comdr. Hall's wife (played by Virginia Valli.)

Other talking, singing, and dancing attractions on the bill are: "Marking Time" with Pat Rooney Family, a comedy entitled "The Talkies," and a spectacle called "Festival of Bagdad" and Talker News.

Musical Art Quartet

On Wednesday evening, January 15, the Musical Art Quartet of New York, will give its second concert of the series of three, in Jordan Hall at 8:15. The personnel includes Sascha Jacobsen, first violin; Paul Bernard, second violin; Louis Kaufman, viola, and Marie Roemaet-Rosanoff, 'cello.

"WEAK SISTERS" FILMED AS PLAY OF "DUMB-BELLS"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, Jan. 6—I hand Warner Brothers the gold-plated medal for their first 1930 change of title. Listen well, my children, for it's one that will be repeated. I have no doubt, in a variety of ways. "Dumb-bells in Ermine" is the new name for "Weak Sisters." This is the same old play, "Weak Sisters," by Gene Starling, that ran in New York three or four years ago and which Harvey Thew is now adapting for the screen.

Since the screen version is to deal with a gentlemanly prize-fighter, who better than Robert Armstrong could be chosen for the lead? Mr. Armstrong, who is now free-lancing, has had a number of offers since he bade Pathe farewell.

Clade Gillingwater has an important role, and Beryl Mercer plays the part of one of the most colorful roles of the year. John Adolfi will direct.

"The Jollies of 1830" are on the carpet for the Fox Company. John Biystone will direct and Owen Davis, Jr., is writing a dramatic story.

In the cast so far are John Garrick and Maureen O'Sullivan, the little Irish girl brought here by the John McCormick company. Marjorie White and Tommy Clifford. Of course, Fifi Dorsay, starring Jack Smith, Charles Judels, Nosi Francis, Wilka Chase, Walter Catlett and all the rest in with will contribute their bit. As for the dance directors, they, too, will do their special numbers.

Big Job for Santley

The name, Joseph Santley, has counted for a great deal on the stage for the last 15 years. He has been both a star in musical comedy and a director. Pathe must have taken cognizance of this when they put him in complete charge of all musical comedy productions for them. His first will be "The Treasure Girl," the musical comedy originally intended for pretty little Jeanette Loff.

Miss Loff is now under contract to Universal, so I cannot say whether she will be borrowed to play in "The Treasure Girl" or not. What about Ivy Sawyer, dainty blonde wife of Joseph Santley? Of course, I haven't seen Miss Sawyer for ten years, but when last I saw her she was slim, young and beautiful, and I am sure neither she nor Mr. Santley can be very old now.

Laemmle Writer Now

The son of Carl Laemmle is not only a producer, but a writer as well. He has just written an original story which will be

Glenn Tryon's next. It is to be called "Come Eleven" and will be directed by William Craft. Junior has always had an urge to be in the movies. Long long ago when he was knee-high to a grasshopper, he used to tell his father what was wrong with Universal pictures. His father listened, too. Now that Junior is in charge out there, probably the tables are turned and Carl Laemmle, Sr., tells Junior what is wrong.

One thing is certain—Joan Bennett will not play opposite Roland Colman in "Raffles." The youngest member of the Bennett family has been signed to make a picture for the Fox Company.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gloria Swanson, stunningly gowned in white, wearing emeralds, dining with Corinne Griffith who also looked exquisite in an ivory colored satin. Mrs. Louis Mayer in a becoming green evening frock, playing bridge at the same dinner. Louis B. Mayer sitting at the table with his two pretty daughters. Mrs. George Archainbaud, letting her hair grow long and receiving compliments on her new coiffure. Mrs. Conrad Nagel in black with corals, looking like a debutante. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Novel Dancing Act Tops Scollay Sq. Bill

At the Scollay Square Olympia The Devils Revels, the featured act, is primarily a dancing act. All the principals are strippers and a large variety of dances, singles and ensembles are presented, but the method of presentation is original.

Theater Guild Actor Sees and Hears Self on Screen

Dudley Digges, one of the prominent members of the Theater Guild Acting Company, this afternoon attends the matinee performance at Loew's State as the guest of Manager Joseph H. Brennan to see and hear himself on the screen with Ronald Colman and Ann Harding in the all-talking picture, "Condemned." He will be accompanied by his fellow members of the Guild cast.

Digges, who has appeared in more than 30 plays in his 10 years on the legitimate stage, will be witnessing his first effort on the motion picture screen. In "Condemned" he portrays the role of Vidal, the warden of Devil's Island. At present Digges is at the Hollis St. Theater, where he is playing the part of Andrew Undershaft in Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara."

Women's Symphony

Leginska's Women's Symphony Orchestra will appear on January 29 at John Hancock Hall.

FILM RIVALS COHAN'S BIG STAGE HIT

Johnny Jones	Eddie Buzzell
Mary Baker	Alice Day
Vivian Dale	Edna Murphy
Ed Baker	Robert Edeson
George Wyman	Wheeler Oakman
Lopez	Donald Reed

"Little Johnny Jones," brought up to the minute but recognizable as an old and lovable friend and a stellar vaudeville program, feature the Keith-Albee entertainment this week. "Little Johnny Jones" was of course one of George M. Cohan's greatest musical comedy hits. Eddie Buzzell, one of Broadway's favorite comedians, took time off from his New York show to play the title role of "Little Johnny Jones," the Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Old timers will think of Cohan dancing, singing his characteristic songs in his memorable way and waving the American flag when they hear two of the songs Eddie Buzzell sings in his new picture. For "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "Give My Regards to Broadway" have been retained from the musical show.

Alice Day plays opposite Buzzell, and Edna Murphy as a blonde vamping actress teaches the hero about women and about New York night life. Donald Reed, Robert Edeson and Wheeler Oakman are other favorites in the excellent supporting cast.

On stage, the original Arkansaw Travellers, the Weaver Brothers, Missouri's two-man jazz band, genius and gigantic mountaineers, have the aid of Elviry, another capable member of the Weaver family. In addition to their regular act, the Weavers are presenting an afterpiece called "Home Folks," which is for all the world like a big country party in which each one gets up and does his or her stuff.

"TIGER ROSE" SCREEN ROLE COLORFUL

The Cast

Devlin	Monte Blue
Rose	Lupe Velez
Joe	Bull Montana
Holmie	Slim Summerville
Bruce	Grant Withers
Fiorello	Louis Morelo
Pierre	Gaston Glass
Dr. Cusick	H. B. Warner
Father Thibault	Emil Chautard
Sentry	Rin-Tin-Tin

"Tiger Rose" is a most colorful and exciting melodrama. It is a story of love and adventure, well acted by capable actors. The story is splendid material for the talking screen. This tale holds up from start to finish, with bright, interesting dialogue, powerful dramatic episodes and outdoor scenes that are spellbinding.

The cast was well chosen. Monte Blue plays the role of Sergt. Devlin of the Northwest Mounted Police. It suits him perfectly. In the first place he looks like a hero of the great Northwest and that gives him a great start. Then his talents permit him to sincerely portray the man of great courage who is tender and gentle in his love for Rose.

And where could one find an actress better fitted to play the role, untamed Rose than Lupe Velez. Here is a girl worth watching. Every glance, every motion, every word is vivid and delightful. H. B. Warner gives another of his excellent characterizations, and Gaston Glass, Tully Marshall, Grant Withers and Bull Montana are all fine. Rin-Tin-Tin adds color to the proceedings.

The story is of primitive outdoor people who resent the invasion of modern scientists and engineers. Rose, foster daughter of Father MacCollins, the Hudson Bay factor at the Loon river post, is the belle of the North Woods.

WINCHESTER DEB IN BOW TONIGHT

THE CHARMING DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Greco of Everett ave., Winchester, Miss Constance Greco, is being presented by them at a dance at the Winchester Country Club this evening. John Carrere is in charge of a corps of ushers which is comprised of Benjamin Dutton, James Kimberley, Edgar Harding, Walter Salmon, Jr., Robert Tilton, James Baldwin, William Fairbanks, John Gage, Francis Dabney, Hugh Bancroft, Jr., and John Cole. They are to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Greco at a dinner preceding the dance, this affair also to take place at the club.

IN HONOR OF MRS. GALEN STONE of Brookline, Mrs. Benjamin F. Pitman is giving a dinner this evening at her home on Carlton st., Brookline. Mrs. Stone is leaving shortly for Honolulu, where she is planning to spend the winter. Mrs. Arthur Weld of Beacon st. is also to be a hostess at dinner tonight. Hers is a small one in honor of her niece, Miss Margaret Wentworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Strafford Wentworth of Milton. Miss Wentworth made her debut three seasons ago, and is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club.

MISS LAETITIA ORLANDINI, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vittorio Orlandini of Marlborough st., has recently returned from a house party at the home of Mrs. Euphemia T. Slade in Quebec. The guests enjoyed all the privileges afforded them by the Chateau Frontenac in the way of winter sports. Miss Orlandini is to make her debut at a dance next month that her aunt, Mrs. Curtis Guild, is having in her honor at the Ritz-Carlton. Miss Orlandini is one of the season's group of buds fortunate enough to be elected to membership in both the Junior League and the Vincent Club.

"THE KINGDOM OF THE Million Elephants and the White Parasol" will be described by Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., at a meeting of the Boston Society of Natural History in the Museum Building Wednesday night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Coolidge will describe the adventures of four zoologists sent out by the Field Museum of Chicago to the unknown mountainous interior of French Indo-China. This division of the Roosevelt Expedition was headed by Coolidge and traveled more than 1000 miles. Owing to the limited space in the museum lecture hall and the fact that most of the members have announced their intention of attending this meeting the society will be forced to discontinue its last scent practice of having the meeting open to the public. Only members and invited guests will be admitted.

IT IS THIS EVENING IN SYMPHONY Hall that Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, noted South African statesman, is to speak at an affair sponsored by the Massachusetts committee for the tenth anniversary of the League of Nations. A coterie of Junior League girls are going to usher in this group are Miss Nancy Adams, Miss Polly Beale, Miss Mary Louise Butterfield, Mrs. Benjamin Brewster, Miss Anne Clifford, Mrs. Charles Terry Collens, Mrs. Gordon Dewart, Miss Virginia Ellis, Miss Mary Eustis, Miss Rosamond Gardiner, Miss Jane Garfield, Miss Margaret Ives, Miss Eugenia Frothingham, Miss Rose Movius, Miss Rosamond Rust, Miss Virginia Taylor and Miss Alison Towle.

THE NEW ENGLAND Historic Genealogical Society of Ashburton pl. is to have a number of papers and historical entertainments presented every Wednesday during 1936, the tercentennial year of Massachusetts. An address by Dr. Samuel Atkins Eliot, migtator of the Arlington st. church, opened the series, with a talk last Thursday entitled, "The Impulses and Purposes of the Founders of Massachusetts."

INVITATIONS TO BE PATRONESSES have been sent out for a concert by Hazel Harrison in Jordan Hall on January 29. She is a young woman of the same race as Roland Hayes and seems to have as a pianist a similar promise to that which Mr. Hayes had as a vocalist. A number of prominent society women are already included in the group of sponsors, among them Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Mrs. J. Dallinger Barney, Mrs. Arthur T. Cabot, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. N. Penrose Hallowell, Mrs. Charles E. Mason, Mrs. John F. Moore, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine 2d, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., and Miss Alice F. Tapley.

MRS. HAROLD L. CHALIFOUX of Marlborough st. is departing for Europe about the middle of the month. It is probable that she will be returning to this country about the last of May.

"My Skin Nearly Drove Me Mad"

"I had pimples and blackheads so badly, and used to squeeze them so much that my face looked red and raw. On the advice of a nurse friend I got a jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and used it faithfully for ten days. In 3 days' time there was a big difference in my skin and today it is as soft and clear as my ten-year-old sister's."

The sulphur in Rowles Mentho-Sulphur clears the skin while the Menthol heals the sore, broken tissue. That's the two-fold action you want for skin troubles. Try Rowles Mentho-Sulphur not only for pimples and blackheads, but for dry, scaly skin, rash, and itching eczema. IT WORKS! All druggists sell it in jars ready to use. Be sure it's Rowles.

Jackets Make Your Outfits Versatile and Young

NOW that Christmas is well over, the children back in school, the house set back in perfect order after the holiday melee, what next? Why, spring clothes, of course—particularly spring suits. If you have one now that the weather is frigid, you can wear it under your fur coat, and the minute the first warm days arrive, you can leave off your coat and be ready with a smart tweed, or a well tailored jersey.

Coat lengths and styles are as varied as the flowers in May. The costumes sketched here are but three of the many different types. The first shows that suit which is cut on Norfolk lines. It is a popular type for sports wear with a slightly fitted jacket and a flaring skirt.

At the right is another type of jacket costume which is also chiefly used for sports. The coat is nipped in at the waist with a series of small vertical tucks. It may match or contrast with the skirt.

THEN there's the Eton jacket, again smart. One of these is sketched centrally in the illustration here. You will note that the jacket is a little longer than it formerly was.

Also very smart for spring will be the matching finger-length jacket and dress. This may be fashioned of a print or it may be in one of the season's smart pastel shades.

Belt Is Important Feature of the New Suits

THE belt that marks the newly-defined waistline is one of the most important parts of the new suit and is varied in the most interesting ways. The newest conceit is the belt that has a small, triangular piece cut out to reveal the lighter color of the blouse beneath. There is a very narrow buckle on this belt.

Another belt pins two tabs of the blouse beneath the buckle, which is posed in the center front. A yoke that fastens to the blouse is another variation of the tuck-in skirt that is almost invariably chosen for the new ensemble.

QUITE a different type of jacket costume is noted in the shops. This is a sort of Dr. Jekyll-and-Mr. Hyde-dress, called that because of its versatility. In the daytime the frock is seen at formal teas. In the evening the little bolero, which hides the lace cap sleeves, is doffed and presto! you are ready for dinner at the club.

ONE version of this quick-change costume has the high waist and the long, even-all-around skirt of the formal mode.

You will find boleros on other types of frocks as well. They promise to be very popular because of the higher waistlines.

Yes, there's no doubt about it, there is to be another jacket season, so suit yourself now and be fashionable!

GEN. SMUTS MEETS OLD FRIEND AT ARBORETUM

Rush Begins in Boston for Enlistment in Coast Guard

Air Romance, Better Than "Chickie"

CHAPTER 33

SHADOWS fell on the gaunt face of Tom Burns and on the dark, ugly pool in which his head was sunk.

The reporters turned from the sight. They went to the east wall, not knowing what new horror might confront them.

The boards opened on a crude closet. On a shelf was a typewriter, with the odd peculiarities in the letters "B," "k," "M," "e," "c." There was also a gas stove, chipped crockery and a pistol. In the corner was a battered old phonograph with the note, 'Try the records."

There were a dozen of these records. They put one on the machine A sharp metallic voice shrilled out: "I'm going to feed you now Sit perfectly quiet. If you shout when I remove the gag, you'll be promptly and permanently silenced Obey!"

The strident command struck dismally through the tense quiet. Each record was in the same woman's voice; each had a different command. They ground out with a bleak, tawdry pathos that mocked the grim figure on the bed.

The diary of Tom Burns' crime was spotted all through with this appalling, misdirected brilliance On the fly-leaf was a tribute to the editor who had tried to save him from prison and tried again to have him released Christmas Eve before his child should die.

There followed pages seared with dark, ruinous passions. The fearful time when the father watched his son dying—his obsession that $1,500 would save the little boy. Bryce refused to give this sum; Elliott innocently blocked the man's attempt to steal it. To Tom Burns, these two became his son's murderers.

Terrible prison days he lay and planned his revenge. Oh—to get the two of them! Make Bryce agonize as he had!

From the moment of his release Tom Burns planned the kidnaping He believed that dungeon behind the garage; he watched little Billy Bryce at play in the park. He plotted with Partridge and Montgomery. He made friends with Guy's dog. Bit by bit the elaborate details came to him. One Sunday he came upon the flume and sent him to retrieve a ball. This gave him the idea for escaping with the ransom.

Another time he worried about Elliott identifying him as his captor. Then he thought of the phonograph and had his poor, troubled wife, Effie make the records. She thought him demented, so humored him.

He saw with diabolic detail the completed crime. Then came Opportunity with the open break between Guy and William Bryce How beautifully this would block on the case against Elliott!

"Monday, October 22—We've done it! Landed the kid without one hitch. Elliott lies doped in my dungeon. Whole city is wild Dicks are shadowing me. Much they'll find!

"October 23—Worked all day Awful that the girl was carried off in the plane! Hope she doesn't queer it. Had to give Elliott a whiff of chloroform. He began plunging like a made bull about the room. I put on one of my records. The woman's voice bewildered him. I've sent Effie to San Carlos to visit her sister—told her to stay the week. Need solitude in times like this.

"Midnight—They've landed at the desert by now if all has gone as programmed. Scores of planes searching. Public terribly inflamed.

"October 24—I'm shadowed. I go to work. Feed Elliott at night. Keep him half doped.

"October 25—Dicks not so hot on my trail. Took the noon hour and delivered my first ransom note. Drove out Haight st., gave a dollar bill and the letter to a kid. Told him to take it to Western Union. Rented to work on time. I've got Jim tied up in an old shed down the Ocean Shore road. After work drove down and fed him. Love that dog. Dicks easing up on me. Can't figure I had anything to do with ransom note when I was at work all day. Elliott wants to wash—refuses to eat. Doesn't like being tied. I feel safe.

"Friday, October 26—This is the day! It's early morning I've just fixed up Slim's old Ford like a fruit wagon. I'm at Slim's house. I've got boxes of spuds, tomatoes and lettuce in the back of the car In this truck I make my getaway with Bryce's $20,000. He'll lay it in the flume tonight! I'll amble away with it down an abandoned road I've found. Who'll ever suspect a truck farmer of the kidnaping? The whole country in the vicinity of the flume is given over to these truck gardens. I'm proud of my plans.

"Six o'clock—Effie's returned Wouldn't she! On this day of days!

"Seven—I've persuaded Effie to go to a movie with Mrs. Gaynor. I'll call for her at 10. I've finished my ransom directions. I've taken that old vanity box of Effie's. Jim has retrieved it hundreds of times. I'm sending it to Bryce for the ransom money. I'm going down now to dress and feed Elliott. My time is figured to the minute.

"Seven forty-five—we start. Gave Elliott coffee with sleeping powders. I'll drive him in my machine to the gulley a mile from the flume. Chloroform and unshackle him. Then back to Mission st. to deliver final ransom notes Then pick up Effie and be in this house shortly after 10

GEN. SMUTS MEETS OLD FRIEND

Has an Enjoyable Chat With Supt. Wilson of the Arboretum

A reunion of two old friends who have met in many other parts of the world took place at noon when Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, South African leader, here for a League of Nations address tonight, visited Arnold Arboretum.

The general called at the famed flower garden to chat with "Chinese" Wilson, the garden superintendent. The two men had crossed paths in England, South Africa and other countries.

General Smuts is an accomplished natural scientist, and was deeply interested in his friend's explanation of the scope of the arboretum.

During the afternoon, Gen. Smuts will call at the State House to pay his respects to Governor Allen. Returning to Mrs. Storrow's home, the visitor will receive a delegation from the New England Zionists League.

Tonight in Symphony hall, Gen Smuts will speak under the auspices of the Massachusetts committee for the 10th Anniversary of the League of Nations.

A veteran of several wars, the general will tell his views of the horrors of warfare and will make suggestions of how combat between nations can be outlawed

Two delegations called upon Gen. Smuts at the Storrow residence at 11 o'clock. One consisted of several members of the Jewish War Veterans' Association of Boston, including men who had served under Gen. Allenby in the Holy Land.

The second group included 15 members of the New England Zionists' Region, which has 10,000 members. Their president, Dr. Hyman Morrison of Boston, was spokesman.

Gen. Smuts has long been interested in Palestine matters.

CURLEY IS GIVEN WILD WELCOME AT CITY HALL

Enters Through a Cheering Lane of Thousands; Office is Banked With Flowers

Mayor Curley returned to City Hall today to a greeting without precedent in the history of municipal affairs.

A crowd of several thousand persons awaited his arrival outside the hall and within it hundreds of city officials and employes formed a cheering lane through which he walked for the third time to the mayor's office.

Long lines of persons who desired to shake his hand formed at the conclusion of a short program of reception, and for a time it seemed an endless procession with the queues winding into School st.

The mayor's office was literally banked with floral tributes as "James Michael" strode in smiling, glanced approvingly around and sat down in "the chair" for the first time in four years.

For a battery of cameras he "did his stuff" as in the old days.

Then James E. Fagan, former election commissioner, stepped forward to present him with a miniature prize ring.

Within the ring were three hats, labeled Curley, Mansfield and Coakley. Excepting the Curley hat they were badly battered. The ring was lettered, "Champion of Them All."

The mayor smiled and remarked, "Somebody evidently sat on Mr. Mansfield's hat."

George E. Phelan, manager of the George Robert White fund, called for three cheers for the mayor, Mrs. Curley and "the best administration in history." They were given with concerned vigor that nearly shook the hall.

The mayor shook hands with about 200 well-wishes and exclaimed: "Let's get down to business"

He rolled up two papers on his desk and a secretary entered to inform him that another crowd, larger than the first, had gathered to shake hands. So he put away business for the time being.

5 PICKED IN ONE HOUR OF RECRUITING

Only Former Coast Guardsmen With Good Records Are Being Accepted

Coast Guard affairs at Newport and New London, coupled with wanton demolition of signs by rum adherents on Boston Common, gave a boost to that service today when the largest crowd for more than two months sought enlistment in the Guard.

In the first hour of recruiting at the Custom House five had been weeded out of the applicants for enlistment. The quintet were all ex-Coast Guardsmen, the only ones that are being accepted at present.

Novices have been excluded from enlistment for two months, but re-enlistments have been accepted, provided good records are produced.

Recruiting officials credited the rush today on the call of the sea to old guardsmen after the Black Duck killings off Newport.

Lufkin Off to Plan Big Conference

Under orders of President Hoover Collector of Customs W. W. Lufkin left for Washington today to assist in arranging a conference of customs collectors for a revision of their work, including methods to thwart rum smuggling.

He stated the orders were not brought on by the Black Duck killings, but will probably be from a customs viewpoint. Questions on "hip-slapping" and other problems brought about by the Volstead Act will be considered.

With Collectors Eldridge of New York and Chenaki of Chicago, Collector Lufkin will meet Commissioner Eberle Wednesday to arrange for a meeting of all the collectors in the country during February.

Uniform rules on procedure in the search of landing passengers are to be sought, due to the varied situations found in different sections of the country.

Travelers have complained at many of the seaboard ports when guards subjected them to search when the passengers felt it was not necessary.

Questions of appraisal are to be met due to changes in style of modern wearing apparel and jewelry which makes them difficult to classify on account of varied materials.

ODD DEATH IN SALEM PROBED

A man, said by the Salem police to be Mark Thornton, 58, of 22 Cox ave., Beverly, is dead, and Salem police, at the request of Medical Examiner James E. Simpson, of Salem, are investigating the cause of his death.

Thornton died at Salem Hospital where he was taken in the police ambulance after he was found unconscious in a sitting position in the corner of the Simmons coal plant in Mason st., Salem.

Sergt. Thomas Hyde, with other officers rushed to the scene after a telephone call had reached police headquarters that a man was endeavoring to break into the Simmons office

When they arrived they found Thornton unconscious, with his shoes off, and a bottle and a can beside him.

Twelfth Night at Tufts Woman's Club

Twelfth Night will be celebrated tonight at Tufts by an informal gathering of the members of the Woman's Club, to which their husbands and all other members of the faculty are invited. Games, dancing and bridge will occupy the evening.

At the home of Dean Frank G. Wren, Mrs. Wren and Vice-Dean Caroline M. Robinson will be hostesses to the club at its next regular meeting on Jan. 9. The speaker will be Richard F. Fuller, treasurer of the Old Colony Boat Club, who will talk on the censorship of books.

Cashier Steps Out, Thief Steps In

While the cashier at the Eliot at garage, Eliot and Stuart sts., left his office for a few moments a thief entered and grabbed $100 in bills, which was on the desk to hide a cashier's cage, according to a report made to the police.

The cashier was called to another part of the garage and left the money which he was counting on the top of the desk. It is believed that someone who saw the unprotected office entered and stole the money.

Friend Saves Man Overcome by Fumes

Fumes from his automobile motor left running while he was working in his garage with the doors closed nearly caused the death of Arthur Pratt, 975 Commercial st., East Waymouth. Pratt, overhauling his automobile, finding that the garage was cold and closed the doors

Later in the day friends calling on Pratt heard the motor of his car running and went to the garage One of them, Frederick Ferris went into the garage and carried Pratt out. Artificial respiration revived him.

Fire Sweeps House; All Doors Locked

A fire swept through the second and third floors of a five-story brick block at 602 Harrison ave., South End, while the occupants of the house were out Patrolman Harvey Yates of the East Dedham st. station, who discovered the blaze, smashed his way into the building and found the door to every room in the house locked.

NEAR DEATH IN 15-FOOT FALL

Leo Leger, 38, of Salem st., Salem, is dying at the Salem Hospital as a result of a fractured skull and internal injuries suffered when he fell 15 feet from a rear piazza to the street.

According to Lieut. Charles A. R. Durfee of the Salem police, Leger with Rosario Duchene, of Mall st., Salem, had been to a party and had gone for a short stay to the home of Duchene's sister, Mrs. Justin Dionne, on Derby st. Leger was walking down the rear stairway ahead of Duchene. When they reached the landing on the second floor in the rear of the house, Leger lost his balance, police say, and fell over the guard rail to the street.

Leg Broken in Crash

John H. Shannon of Dartmouth st., Everett, suffered a broken right leg and other injuries when the automobile he was driving along the Andover-Reading highway in North Reading, was in collision with a machine operated by Arthur F. Shun of Main st., Melrose.

B. & M. AGENTS SEE BIG YEAR

The year 1930 will be a year of increasing business activity in practically every section of the country with the prosperity levels preceding the stock market break likely to be closely approximated again before the year closes.

This was the concensus of report by general agents of the Boston & Maine railroad who started today at the Hotel Lenox their annual two-day convention The Boston & Maine's representatives from offices in the principal cities of the United States and Canada outside New England were among the 72 persons at the meeting.

It was announced at the convention that the freight traffic handled by the Boston & Maine in 1929will amount to almost $52,000,000.

Reports from the various delegates to the convention showed that the operating forces of the Boston & Maine Railroad in 1929 made a record that has been commended upon favorably all over the country

Manning Calls Bauer Deal Illegal

A bitter attack upon Mayor Ralph S. Bauer as the cause of Lynn's suffering "taunts and ridicule of all New England" was a feature of the inaugural talk of J. Fred Manning as Lynn's new chief executive.

The new mayor told a crowd of 3000 at Lynn City Hall that the out-going executive had used a publicity smoke screen to hide his methods of issuing contracts in an "illegal and morally indefensible" manner.

"I will not sound the horn and beat the drum of publicity," began the mayor, "to divert public attention while purchases amounting to thousands of dollars are being made without contracts and while contracts for other thousands of dollars are awarded to favorites without bids

"Such purchases and contracts which my predecessor awarded in the matter of printing, cement, loam, etc., are illegal and morally indefensible."

"No thought of personal aggrandizement or vainglory will ever persuade me to take advantage of my position as chief executive to bask in the limelight while our city and its people suffer the taunts and ridicule of all New England."

The new mayor announced policies directly opposite those of the out-going official. Mayor Bauer at one time had said that "nature must take its course" in the matter of snow removal and ordered equipment to be idle while the sun melted the snow.

Mayor Manning said that the city streets should be kept open all the time. He urged the city council to give "quick consideration" to buying new equipment.

Another striking change is the plan of Mayor Manning to reopen the city's $150,000 incinerator. The previous mayor had stopped use of this and had the garbage burned otherwise.

Mayor Manning said that it was time to eliminate the disagreeable odors involved.

The new mayor indicated that he intended to have a "hands off" policy with the fire and police departments, which he highly praised

OVERCOAT THIEF PICKS JOBLESS

An overcoat thief who has eluded the police for several weeks and driven a brand new auto was reported to be working in Lynn again with more than a dozen victims to his credit.

John A. Gooby of 4 Willis st., East Saugus, told the Lynn police that a smooth-behaving man about 30 years of age driving a new car on North Franklin st. stopped his car and asked Gooby if he wanted a job. After a few minutes of talk they went to a factory on Broad st. and the driver told him to leave his overcoat in the car, go into the building and ask for Mr. Dwyer. Failing to get any response, Gooby came out to find the stranger, and the car and his overcoat gone

Always the thief selects an unfortunate individual who is out of employment and he apparently has studied the faces of young men and knows their desire for a job.

Curley Hurries to Wife's Side After His Inaugural

The first act of Mayor James M. Curley, after he had become mayor of Boston, was to gather his family together and go directly to the bedside of his wife in their home in Jamaicaway.

Arriving at his home, the mayor went directly to his wife's sick room, where he sat with her for 15 minutes discussing the details of the inauguration exercises.

Mrs. Curley had been listening in to the program as it came over the radio directly from Symphony Hall stage.

SEE METROPOLITAN BOSTON WITH 2,543,124 IN NEW CENSUS

DISTRICT MAY INCLUDE 120 CITIES

Chamber of Commerce Expert Devises Three Possible Population Areas

When the census army of 125,000 federal employes finish taking the count in Boston and vicinity the Hub may blossom forth in a new form of "Metropolitan Boston," with a population ranging as high as 2,543,124.

The authority for this 1930 census estimate is "Boston Business," the official Chamber of Commerce publication. Today's issue contained a summary by Ellerton J. Brahaul, manager of the Chamber's civic bureau.

Having been informed that the U. S. census takers are willing to revise the methods of computing totals for large cities, the Chamber of Commerce devised three possible areas of population centers.

The first district suggested is known in the plan as District A, and would encircle 1,000 square miles. The circle boundaries would have 409 square miles and cover 40 cities.

The second proposed census district of Metropolitan Boston would have a population of 2,015,587, with an area of 750 square miles and of 64 cities and towns.

The largest district would comprise 120 cities and towns within 30 miles of Boston and would have 1787 square miles, with more than 2,500,000 people.

JAIL-BREAKERS ESCAPE POLICE IN HUB CHASE

Wethersfield Prison Suspects Race Through Roxbury in a Stolen Car

Racing the police through Roxbury and West Roxbury, a machine bearing the number plates of that stolen by three escaped convicts from the Wethersfield, Ct., state prison, escaped pursuit near the East Dedham line early today.

Police from Roxbury Crossing and Jamaica Plain stations and members of Lieut. Gillis' headquarters unit, participated in the wild chase.

RACE THROUGH STREETS

According to Patrolman James J. Sullivan of the Roxbury Crossing police station, he was patrolling his beat in Center st, near the Plant factory when he saw a machine traveling at a rate of speed estimated at 60 miles an hour, disappear out into the street and saw that it was a sedan and covered with mud. He managed to get the number of the car and realized that it was a sedan stolen from Wethersfield Saturday by the three jailbirds.

As there was no automobile nearby, Sullivan rushed to a police box and notified his station. They in turn notified headquarters where Officer Patrick Creighton on duty notified Divisions 17 at West Roxbury, 13 at Jamaica Plain and Lieut. Gillis' special headquarters unit. All three units gave chase and managed to get a clue at West Roxbury.

TOWARD PROVIDENCE

The machine with the alleged prisoners raced into Dedham sq. and turned into the Providence road, racing at breakneck speed, and disappeared from view. All police stations from Dedham to Providence were notified.

Patrolman Sullivan told officials at the Roxbury Crossing station that he was positive of the number he jotted down. He declared the car was traveling at least 60 miles an hour. He said that the car was covered with mud from the radiator to the rear. The driver was operating very recklessly and was racing up the entire road.

Boston police believe it quite possible that the three men have abandoned the car and are hiding in some section of Boston's underworld.

Men's Committee, at Luncheon Meeting, to Formulate $1,500,000 Campaign

Plans for the $1,500,000 New England Medical Center to be erected in Boston were discussed by 125 Boston bankers, attorneys and business men at a special luncheon this noon at the Chamber of Commerce.

Ralph Lowell of Lee, Higginson & Co., chairman of the men's committee of the drive, presided. The speakers were ex-Gov. Channing H. Cox, President John A. Cousens of Tufts College and John R. Macomber.

The medical center program will include a dispensary, a free hospital for babies and small children, a medical school and scientific laboratories under one central plan. Medical students will be trained to become general practitioners to serve smaller communities in New England which are in great need of resident physicians.

Associated with Lowell, it was announced, will be 18 vice chairmen, as follows:

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG!

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do that you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes — pimples — a bilious look in your face — dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and cleaning the system of impurities. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Pencilled Will Valid Court Decrees

The full bench of the Supreme Court today affirmed a decree of Judge Prest of the Suffolk Probate Court in allowing the will of Marianna Messina of 191 Garfield ave., Revere.

The point at issue was whether the will was not invalidated because the ink in the fountain pen ran out and she completed the document with a lead pencil.

The Supreme Court says that the will was not invalidated, and that wills may be written in a combination of a pen and pencil and on several sheets of different kinds of paper too. The court says that an omission to name an executor in the will did not make the will defective.

The will was written in Italian. It left $500 for funeral expenses, and the residue of the property of the testatrix was to be divided equally between two sons and four daughters. Mrs. Messina was in bed when she told the notary what she wanted and she signed what he wrote.

JOHN J. CURLEY SERIOUSLY ILL

While his brother was being inaugurated mayor of Boston today, John J. Curley was seriously ill at his home in Winthrop st., Roxbury, threatened with appendicitis.

His condition is critical, according to members of his household They said he was worse today than yesterday.

Drs. William Fleming and David D. Scannell, who are attending the patient, said a surgical operation will be performed as soon as his condition warrants.

John was very anxious to see his brother inaugurated mayor of Boston for the third time, and was disappointed because his physical condition would not permit him to be present. John and James have been inseparable for many years in office and each has contributed to the other's success.

John was city treasurer during his brother's last administration. A few days ago he declined to accept the same job in the present administration because of his private business interests.

Waltham Minister Called to Old North

The Rev. Francis E. Webster, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, at Waltham for the past 20 years, has tendered his resignation in order to accept the pastorate of the Old North Church.

His resignation provoked expressions of disappointment and regret among the parishioners, with whom the pastor is exceedingly popular.

Three years ago he was called to the pastorate of the Old North Church. Upon receiving the second call he determined it was his duty to respond.

HOLDUP FOILED BY OFFICER

A holdup in Woodrow ave., Dorchester, was frustrated last night by Patrolman John Deintry of Matapan station, according to a confession the police claim they obtained today from Joseph Appicbaum, Brush Hill rd., Milton, and Alfred Hayes, 17, of Ticket st., Milton. The youths confessed today, according to the police, that they were waiting for customers to leave the store of Samuel Pearlmutter before going in and staging a holdup when Patrolman Deintry came along, questioned them and then took them to the police station.

They said they had been walking around the district for two hours intent on robbery and had picked out Pearlmutter's store as the most likely place to stage a holdup and make a getaway.

As the result of the confession the youths will be arraigned in Dorchester court tomorrow morning charged with carrying a revolver and blackjack and conspiracy to rob, while Appicbaum is charged with conspiracy to rob. The latter had a cigarette case that looked like a gun and the police believe it was intended for use in intimidating persons.

Many Friends Witness Russell Take Oath

Richard M. Russell, the third of an illustrious Cambridge family to assume the office, today was sworn in as mayor of Cambridge before one of the largest and most colorful gatherings ever assembled in the City Council chamber, in City Hall.

Singularly enough, the new mayor took the oath of office on the 49th anniversary of the birth of his father, former governor of the state. He also used the same pen to sign his oath as that used by his father in signing his oath of office as governor.

Despite the fact that many ex-mayors of the city are still living, Mayor Edward W. Quinn was the only one present.

The actual proceedings leading up to the inaugural were mere routine, but the usual drab appearance of City Hall was transformed for the occasion into a bower of brilliant color afforded by the scores of baskets of flowers sent the new mayor by his friends and admirers.

Shortly after 10 a. m. the new council body took their places in the chamber and Charles H. Shea, senior member of the body, acted as president. In this capacity the councillor selected a committee of four to examine the credentials of the in-coming mayor.

An escort from among the council body was then selected and the new mayor was ushered into the chamber on the arm of the retiring mayor. Arriving at the rostrum where the oath of office was administered ex-Mayor Quinn immediately retired.

Rev. George R. Nash, of the Episcopal Theological School, then delivered the invocation and the oath of office was administered to the mayor by City Clerk Frederick H. Burke.

Members of the new council body were then severally sworn in and James J. Casey, principal assessor, also took his oath of office for four years.

TOWN'S FUNDS OVERDRAWN

Criticism of the preparation of the annual budget of the town of Sandisfield is contained in an audit report made today to the selectmen by Theodore N. Waddell, director of the State division of accounts.

"A comparison of the appropriations voted by the town as listed from the town clerk's records at town meeting with the aggregate amount expended from each of the several appropriations, disclosed overdrawn accounts aggregating $2755 in 1926, $1832.91 in 1927, $2614.49 in 1928 and $82.25 to October 5," the report said.

To incur liabilities in excess of appropriations is "contrary to section 31, chapter 44, General Laws," Waddell warned.

He complained that the treasurer had been paying bills of various departments without approval by the selectmen, "whose signatures to the warrants are obtained subsequent to payment of the bills."

LINER BRINGS BODY OF SAILOR

Sailor George Gay of Pawtucket, R. I., due home for a Christmas celebration at his mother's house, Mary st., came home today—but in a casket from overseas.

Returning from shore leave, Gay fell over the side of the dock and perished before aid arrived.

Cambridge Mayor May Get More Pay

A bill to increase the salary of the mayor of Cambridge from $5000 to $7500 a year was filed today with the Legislature by Representative Charles T. Cavanagh of that city.

Another bill filed by the same petitioner would allow Cambridge to pay to the widow of Charles H. Thurston, former city auditor, the balance of the salary he would have received had he lived until March 31, 1930.

Lake Street Tieup Delays Passengers

Passengers on the Commonwealth ave.-Lake st. surface lines of the Boston Elevated were inconvenienced today by a tieup near the Lake st. end of the line. The rear truck of a three-car train split a switch and hit a wooden pole on the reservation and knocked it down. The pole fell on the car. Two passengers were on the car, but no one was injured. Cars were operated on schedule time, but passengers from Newton cars were compelled to walk to a point beyond the point of tieup.

Bill Boosts Adams' Salary to $5000

A bill to increase the salary of William C. Adams, director of fisheries and game, from $4000 to $5000 a year was filed today with the clerk of the House by Rep. Willard S. McKay of Newburyport.

Adams was recently reappointed to his position over the protest of some of the fish and game clubs of the state.

Drawn by rumors of jobs said to be available at the Ford plant in Somerville, a great army of men gathered early today in streets near the automobile factory. Police estimated the crowds at 4000 and sent special details to keep order. Sergt. James M. Lynch and five patrolmen arrived soon after the crowds began collecting.

In the mob were hundreds from the different suburbs in Greater Boston, the majority consisted of employes of the company, skilled workmen. The majority consisted of laborers.

'BAWDY BOSTON' AUTHOR IS CALLED BEFORE U. S. GRAND JURY

FEDERAL MEN ASK FACTS ON 'VICE'

Walter W. Liggett Threatens Big "Expose" and Says He Will Hurry Here

Asst. U. S. Atty. Hubert C. Thompson today summoned Walter W. Liggett, author of the magazine article "Bawdy Boston," to appear before the federal grand jury on Jan. 14 and reveal his knowledge of alleged vice and bootlegging activities in Boston.

The subpoena was telegraphed to the U. S. marshal for the District of Columbina, Washington, and a copy was forwarded to that official by mail.

A second telegram was sent to Liggett at the Washington Open Forum, where he was a speaker yesterday.

Liggett will be called upon to reveal to the grand jury knowledge he claims he possesses concerning the underworld of this city.

In a speech at the Washington Open Forum yesterday Liggett stated: "I haven't received any summons yet, but the minute I get one I'll hop a train for Boston and show up the hypocrites who have denounced me for telling the truth.

"Before I get through I'll lay the responsibility on the doorsteps of this dry Governor Allen and this dry Mayor Nichols."

WASHINGTON TO RULE ON FOOTE

The record of the physical examination of Maj.-Gen. Alfred F. Foote, commander of the 26th Division, National Guard, together with those of other officers who took the recent physical test before the surgeon-general, will be forwarded to the militia bureau in Washington this week, Adj.-Gen. Jesse F. Stevens declared today.

Stevens further said that the procedure calls for no recommendation from his office. Should the Washington officials decide the results of the examinations disclose disabilities of enough importance to seriously affect any of the officers' active duty status, he added, his office will be informed and a request for resignations or retirement would follow.

Rum Raider Poses as Ice Man—And How!

Special Officer "Jerry" Sheehan of Mattapan station is a real policeman, but sometimes he has to show his badge to prove it. As an iceman he's a big success, too. His ability to disguise himself cost Mrs. Ernsie Green of Woodrow ave., Dorchester, $200 in Dorchester court today on charges of keeping, exposing and selling intoxicating liquor.

Attiring himself in overalls and jumper and carrying a pair of ice tongs, Sheehan went to Mrs. Green's house and bought a pint of booze. Then he went back and left the door open so that Sergt. Patrick Flaherty entered after him.

Sheehan bought another pint, and as he stepped into the hallway Sergt. Flaherty pushed him back into the kitchen. "What's this bum doing here?" demanded Sergt. Flaherty of Mrs. Green. "He's not a bum; he's an honest iceman," replied Mrs. Green.

Flaherty then took the pint from Sheehan, but Mrs. Green denied selling it to him and she wouldn't believe he was a policeman until he showed her his badge.

13 SESSIONS AT COURTHOUSE

The full bench of the State supreme court and civil sessions of the superior court will begin sessions for 1930.

Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg and Associate Justices John C. Crosby, James B. Carroll, George A. Sanderson and Fred T. Field were upon the bench of the supreme court. The session opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, president of Boston University. Although in prior years the January docket has been very large, only about 50 cases were upon the list today.

No clergyman appeared to open the session of the Superior court. It was expected that the Right Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Brookline, would be present, but he failed to arrive and the courts were opened without the accustomed formality. Eight jury sessions and four without juries will each have a justice of the court to preside over them.

For the first time since October, when he was stricken with bronchial pneumonia, Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall came from his home in Fitchburg, and for a short time sat in the Fourth Session with Judge Walsh.

DEDICATE NEW AIRPORT PLANT SATURDAY

Airplane Sales and Service Building Is Open to Public Inspection Next Sunday

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

New England's first airplane sales and engine service building, a complete institution, will be officially dedicated Saturday evening, and will be thrown open to public inspection Sunday, January 12.

The building is located at the Boston municipal airport, and is owned by the East Coast Aircraft Sales Corp. of which Frederick Lothrop Ames is president and Frank D. Lehan is sales manager.

According to LeMan, the dedication Saturday night is strictly an invitation affair, and will be formal, making the first occasion of its kind on the airport.

Attending the dedication will be a group of officials from the Wright Aeronautical Co., Keystone-Loening Aircraft Corp., and Travel Air Co., all of which East Coast represents in New England. All the dozen of East Coast, and most of the boys who have brought their motors in for overhaul or checking up, will be present, and Fred Ames is planning a night that will live long in the memories of those who attend.

Starting on the airport side of the building, one finds a showroom large enough to hold a Travel Air cabin monoplane, and which will be lined with showcases containing various aviation items. On the right side of this front section are the offices, two stories high; on the second floor of which, overlooking the airport, Fred Ames has his private office.

LeMan is next in line, and then the Harvard Flying Club and Boardman Aircraft Corp. also have their offices. H. E. Wallis, service manager, is fitted out with a private room, and all the boys are happy with their locations.

Finally, in the rear of the building one finds the motor overhaul room and stock room. The overhaul part is outfitted with an complete a layout of equipment as one will find at the Wright factory in Paterson, N. J., and is capable of taking four, if pushed, of the Whirlwind motors at one time on the famous Wright sliding scale of overhaul.

Dan Rochford, for the past several years aviation editor of the Transcript, and who is going with an American Airways as publicity manager, was royally sent off at the Lenox, if we are to judge by the number of his friends who turned out, and the tribute-paying speeches made by the railway head table.

Johnnie Haughey, vice-president of Skyways, was toastmaster, and introduced in turn Gardiner Fiske acting chairman of the Boston Municipal Air Board; Robert F. "Bugs" Raymond, representing the National Aeronautic Association; Lieut. A. M. Bennett from Squantum Naval Air Base, representing the navy fliers; Lieut. Joe Wilson, U. S. Army Air Corps at the airport; Theodore Holcombe of the Aviation Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce; Franklin Collier, "Otto Grow," representing the press, and who presented Dan with a scroll signed by everybody at the banquet; Maj. Louis Boutwell, commanding officer of the National Guard Air Unit; Arthur Horn, who presented Rochford with a model of a tri-motor Fokker; Robert L. O'Brien, state supervisor of aviation; Eddie O'Toole, Boston's first commercial operator on the Boston Airport; Airport Superintendent Albert "Eddie" Fetson; Tom Grace, a pioneer airplane operator at Boston Airport; Harold Dennison of Dennison Airport and Ed Radasch of Old Colony Airways, Revere.

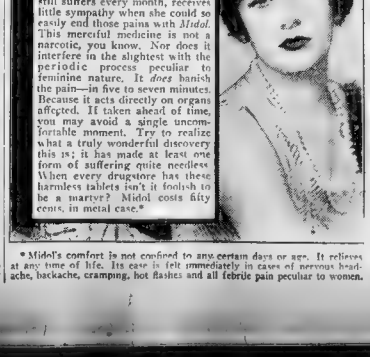
Acid Stomach

Excess acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. It is harmless and tasteless and its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, never continue to suffer, when you learn how quickly, how pleasantly this relief comes. Send coupon for proof acts. Please let it show you—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.



The unenlightened woman who still suffers every month, receives little sympathy when she could so easily end those pains with Midol. This merciful medicine is not a narcotic, you know. Nor does it interfere in the slightest with the periodic process peculiar to feminine nature. It does banish the pain—in five to seven minutes. Because it acts directly on organs affected. If taken ahead of time, you may avoid a single uncomfortable moment. Try to realize what a truly wonderful discovery this is; it has made at least one form of suffering quite needless. When every drugstore has these harmless tablets isn't it foolish to be a martyr? Midol costs fifty cents, in metal case.*

* Midol's comfort is not confined to any certain days or age. It relieves at any time of life. Its ease is felt immediately in cases of nervous headache, backache, cramping, hot flashes and all febrile pain peculiar to women.

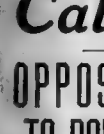
OPPOSITION TO POLICIES GROWING

By BILL GRIMES

UNLESS President Frank Calder cuts out his "stunting" and devotes all of his time and attention to "straight flying," he is going into a spin which will be followed by a crash, making it necessary for the appointment of a new pilot to guide the destiny of the National Hockey League.

Failure to appreciate the superior intelligence of the present board of governors over those of previous eras, which is strong leaning toward Canadian interests and his hostile actions towards one of the most influential club owners, is responsible for Calder's trouble.



Bill Grimes

Until American capital became the dominating factor in the N. H. L. Prss., Calder was in a position to rule the game with an iron hand.

Irresponsibility and questionable judgment of some of the members of governing board, when American interests entered hockey, made it mandatory for the newcomers to trail along with Calder. They could not afford to rely upon the judgment of some governors, and right or wrong, they supported Calder.

PRESENT BOARD SOUND

The present board of governors is composed of successful and reputable business men. At least, they have been successful in other walks of life, and most of them are reputable citizens.

With such men as William Foran, Ottawa; Charles Hughes, Detroit; Col. Hammond, Rangers; Major McLaughlin, Chicago; Leo Dandurand, Canadiens, and Charles F. Adams, Boston, on its board of governors, the National Hockey League is in the hands of sound thinking business men.

At the annual meeting of the National Hockey League last spring in Toronto Frank Calder was re-elected as president for five years, but the duration of this contract is binding only as far as the salary involved is concerned. It is within the power of the governing board to sever Pres. Calder's connection with the league at will.

From time to time, during the past four or five years, President Calder's decisions have been questioned, but with few exceptions, there were not sufficient demand for a show down behind these protests.

BOARD BACKS McLAUGHLIN

Recently, however, Major McLaughlin called for an investigation, which did not furnish enough action for the fiery Chicago promoter. President Calder rendered a decision after a one-sided hearing and immediately Major McLaughlin tendered his resignation as a member of the board of governors, at the same time expressing himself candidly as to his opinion of any governing body conducting a business along the lines of the N. H. L.

The board of governors refused to accept Major McLaughlin's resignation and insisted that he present his case to them. After hearing McLaughlin's side of the story, the board called President Calder on the carpet and when their chief executive retired from the meeting he did so under power of a pair of clipped wings.

In his most recent juggling act, the Vancouver Bill Phillips case, either President Calder took his censuring by the board of governors in Chicago with a grain of salt or he had gone too far to retrace his steps. Now Col Hammond of the New York Rangers, has joined forces with the opposition to the head of the National Hockey League.

EARLY last fall rumors reached Frank Patrick on the Coast that Bill Phillips had announced that he would not play West this season. As the Patrick league was not affiliated with the N. H. L. at that time, Frank Patrick, in order to protect himself, offered to sell Phillips to the Rangers for $7000.

As soon as they started negotiating with Patrick for Phillips the Rangers put this player on their reserve list. Unable to come to terms with Patrick, the Rangers turned their attention to getting Mosimer, an amateur from Niagara Falls, but made the mistake of offering a loophole for

by JACK CONWAY

Jack Conway

"SHELDON H. FAIRBANKS will continue as general manager of the Boston Garden," said Mr. Boston today.

"William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden Corp., is authority for this statement," went on the veteran. "He told me that the Garden Corp. and himself were perfectly satisfied with the way Fairbanks has handled things at the Garden.

"Alex McLean will replace Eddie Mack as matchmaker at the Garden after February 1. He will work in conjunction with Matchmaker Tom McArdle of the New York Garden and Tom Weill who is matchmaker of the Queensboro Club in New York.

"Unless McLean is given a free rein in arranging the boxing shows at the local Garden this city will probably be offered some canned fistic bouts which are not desired in New York. I presume that if it is true that the New York Garden is to dominate the matches that go in at the local Garden that the cards will be well checked up by the Boxing Commission.

"In the past numerous attempts have been made by certain New York matchmakers to operate in the Boston fields, but their efforts have always ended in failure.

"McLean is a capable matchmaker and has had the necessary experience to make a success of his new job if he is not compelled to accept certain matches against his better judgment.

"The recent gate receipts at the New York Garden indicate the Gotham collection of matchmakers are having their difficulties securing suitable cards."

"THE resignation of Eddie Mack as matchmaker at the Garden was expected for some months. Mack, a colorful, likeable type who does not mince his words, was originally given full charge of boxing at the Garden. Eddie is an individualist and could not get anywhere if obliged to talk things over with a board of directors.

"Like Tex Rickard and Tom Goodwin, Mack gets more of a kick out of boxing in putting over a big show than in merely making a lot of money. Now that big business is interested in boxing the question of 'profits is quite important.

"WHEN Rickard arranged a big match, I do not believe he ever thought much as to the amount of money he was going to make out of it. His chief concern was in putting on a big spectacle. The profits usually took care of themselves.

"Tom Goodwin was much the same type. He put on some of the biggest and best boxing shows ever offered in Boston, but when he died he didn't leave much of the goods of the world to his wife.

"During his first year at the Garden, Mack showed a $37 000 boxing profit which set a new mark for Boston.

"EDDIE has already announced that the Argonne A. A., which he once termed the Battlefield of Action, will soon resume stiring. Perhaps the money back of the Boston Garden will eventually lick Mack in his single-handed fight, but you can bet even the coal in the cellar that the sergeant will put up quite a battle before he will give the order to cease firing.

"THE Boston Garden would do well to remember that Mack knows the kind of show the fans in this city want. It should, therefore, move at once to block any attempt of the New York Garden to ship any makeshift matches to Boston. Boxing cannot be operated like vaudeville and burlesque houses despite the fact that some of our ring men are better actors than fighters."

Maloney Is Ready to Meet Garden Victor

THE crushing right hand punch that carried him to a spectacular knockout victory over Big Boy Rawson only recently is now expected to bring Al Friedman, Roslindale heavyweight, victory next Friday night at the Boston Garden, where he clashes with Ernie Schaaf.

Not during the past year has a heavyweight belted his way into the hearts of Hub fans by a solitary victory, yet the Roslindale boy is expected to step into the ring at the Boston Garden well supported by the fans, who are backing him to continue his climb to the top.

For Friedman is only 22 years old in spite of his great experience in the ring and a victory over the hard hitting sailor at this time will put the Roslindale boy in line for some lucrative matches.

With Jimmy Maloney, South Boston heavyweight ready to accept the proposals of Eddie Mack to meet the winner of this bout, the victor will be in line for one of the biggest gates of the past year.

Maloney always has repeatedly refused to consider Schaaf as an opponent, yet it seems that the time has come when the Peninsula man is prepared to go through with such a match if the sailor comes through with a victory over Friedman.

Friedman also is eagerly looking forward to a crack at Maloney and that question is all but definitely settled for Maloney seems willing to clash with Friedman if he should win. It is expected that Maloney will be officially signed to contracts to meet the winner within the next two days.

Sponzer, tribal backstop, who makes his ring debut when he opposes the talkative Shires, baseball's official broadcaster, is continuing his training sessions in the Hub and expects to spring a surprise on the White Sox first baseman.

It is expected that Shires will arrive in the Hub early this week. He plans an early arrival here and no doubt he will be seen in a gymnasium workout.

With one of the best preliminary cards of the season supporting the double feature, it is expected that the biggest throng in the past year will be on hand.

Kirkwood Ties by Fine Finish

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 6.—Joe Kirkwood scored a brilliant 70 in the final round of the $3500 Long Beach open golf tournament, to tie Olin Dutra of Brentwood, N. J., at 218 for first place. They will divide first and second prizes—amounting to $1600.

Clarence Clark of Tulsa, Okla., won third money, $400 with 218.

Henry Cuici of Bridgeport, Conn., was fourth with 219 and Johnny Rodgers of Denver fifth with $220

Four Unbeaten Teams

There were four unbeaten teams in the East this year besides Pitt and Western Maryland, but they were all tied.

TIGERS FACE 2 HARD GAMES

Boston Tigers, champions of the Canadian-American Hockey league, face a stiff fight in their two games this week for possession of second place. The spectacular Providence Reds are too far out front to be overhauled this week, but the Tigers are not yet discouraged in spite of the heart-breaking game they lost Saturday night in the last few seconds.

The game was a tie, but the Tigers regard it as a loss because of the fact that they carried their one-goal lead right down to within three seconds of the final bell when Hago Harrington was permitted to go uncovered for just a fleeting second in front of the Tigers' cage.

The Tigers do not get another crack at the Reds until late this month and the present leaguе leaders will not be seen at the Garden ice again until the last week of the season in March.

The Tigers play twice this week. They journey to Philadelphia for a game Wednesday night and then they host to New Haven at Boston Garden on Saturday night. Providence has three games listed and counting yesterday's engagement, they will have participated in four games within a period of eight days.

Dearon White and Tank Boyd of Boston, together with Art Chapman of Providence and Lloyd Andrews of Philadelphia, are continuing their close battle for individual scoring honors. Waite went scoreless Saturday night, yet he still is showing his heels to his rivals.

The statistics reveal that the Tigers continue to be the most interesting team in the league. It is quite true that they have yielded the most number of goals to the other teams, but it is equally true that their offensive strength far exceeds that of any other team.

M'LEAN NAMED OFFICIALLY

The Garden statement is as follows:

Due to the resignation of Edward B. McManus (Eddie Mack), effective as of February 1, as matchmakes for the Boston Garden Sporting Club, Inc., Al Weill has been appointed assistant to the general manager, Sheldon H. Fairbanks, in direct charge of boxing department, Alex MacLean has been appointed matchmaker.

Each of these men for many years have been successfully identified with professional boxing and under their management Boston and vicinity will be given the high-grade entertainment to which the Boston Garden Corporation feels they are entitled.

Concord H. C. Loses Two Games by 6 to 4

The Concord Hockey Club came out on the short end of both games it played on Crosby's Pond rink, losing both by 6 to 4 scores.

It dropped the first game of a series to the Lincoln Mohawks, in the morning, and was beaten by the Lexington Wanderers, playing their first contest of the season, in the afternoon. Goals by Hodder and James Hutchinson won the game for Lincoln in the closing period.

K. C. Meet to Be Part of Hub Celebration

THE William C. Prout Memorial games, sponsored by the Knights of Columbus of Massachusetts, which will be held in the Boston Garden, the night of January 25, will be the first big gun fired by the body in aiding Major James M. Curley and his Tercentenary committee put on the program for the celebration which is being planned in honor of the 300th birthday of Boston.

Under the direction of the Hon John E. Swift, state deputy of the Knights of Columbus, the state council of the order is drawing up an extensive program of varied events to aid in the tercentenary celebration.

Besides the Prout games, there will be ceremonial exercises at Nantasket Beach when a pioneer Catholic first landed. These will come sometime this summer and it is hoped to bring the supreme convention of the order to Boston sometime during the year.

Other affairs of a smaller nature are being organized under the direction of Deputy Swift, but there is nothing he is more interested in furthering than the annual track and field games of the order which are now a memorial to their founder the late William C. Prout.

"It is the first gun," is the way the state deputy puts it, "and if we can make the meeting the success it has always been we will feel well rewarded for our efforts.

"Linking the meeting with the Tercentenary program will do much in adding to the interest. The K. of C. mile, the feature event on the big program is for the Hon. James M. Curley trophy, a gift of the mayor. This is the second cup Mayor Curley has given for this race.

The first cup went to Lloyd Hahn of the Boston A. A. after seven years of competition. The present Mayor Curley trophy went into competition the first time last winter and Leo Lermond of the Boston A. A. was the winner.

A committee of the Knights of Columbus went to New York for the Columbus Council games in Brooklyn Saturday night. It will report to Deputy Swift today on the success of its efforts to land the big stars for the feature events in the Prout meet.

B. U. FIVE PLAYS H. C. SATURDAY

Boston University varsity basketball five will resume its activities after a three weeks' respite and will meet Worcester Tech Wednesday and Holy Cross Saturday. Both of these contests will be played on their opponents' courts so the Terriers appear to be in for a couple of hard tilts.

Coach Win Karlson is not definitely settled on his starting lineup but will continue to experiment with all possible combinations in an effort to assemble his strongest five for these approaching encounters.

The appearances of Cy Perkins, varsity football star and former Dean Academy basketball scintillant on the squad, has caused a change in Karlson's original plans and it may be that this newcomer will earn a starting berth before the next game.

Perkins reported for the Terrier hoop team last winter and won a regular guard berth but was placed on probation before he had participated in a single game, but his studies are O. K. now and he will be eligible as far as his scholastic standing is concerned.

Reds Shut Out Arrows, 1 to 0

Providence, R. I., Jan. 6.—The Rhode Island Reds continued their undefeated play here at the expense of the Philadelphia Arrows, the score being 1-0

The Reds scored midway through the first period when Chapman passed to Gagnon on a face-off near the goal. Gagnon shot the puck past Roberts.

During the last two periods the teams battled about even, each considerably tired from their games of last night.

THE New England Golden Glove, the greatest amateur tournament ever staged in the Hub, will be held tonight at Mechanics Building.

Never in the long history of amateur boxing has a tournament so gripped the imagination of boxers and public alike.

Out of 250 competitors and 175 fights, 32 of the leading amateurs in New England have survived and they will meet in pitched battle tonight to decide the eight Golden Glove champions for the year 1930.

An added incentive was given the competitors when "Father Bill" Cuddy, dean of amateur boxing promoters in this country, announced that he had completed negotiations with the world champion Italian Olympic team and with a team of German amateurs to meet a New England team in Boston early next month, and that the Golden Glove winners would be selected to compete in the coming international tournament.

FINE BOUTS CARDED

All along the line the rivalry is intense. Some of the outstanding battles would seem to be when Willie Indrisano tangles with Al Dean, in the heavyweight division; when square-jawed Ug Gibson of Revere and Pat O'Flaherty of South Boston clash in the 175-pound class; when Jack McCarthy, brilliant Roxbury 160-pounder, fights off the combined efforts of John Sweeney of South Boston, Eino Nyholm of Maynard and George Yeo of Cambridge; and when George Ostrow of Revere steps for-to-to-to chin with Arthur Nadeau, his bitter little rival from Cambridge.

The heavyweights and light-heavyweights promise to produce thrills enough for one evening. In the heavyweight class are Indrisano, Dean, Tony Cecchini and Salvatore Andracchio, and in the light-heavyweights there are Gibson, O'Flaherty, Paul McNamara, brilliant Allston prospect, and Charles Aleck of Cambridge. There will be jumping aplenty, and knockouts aplenty.

Many of the New England girls' athletic champions will appear, including Rena MacDonald, Katherine Mearis, Florence MacDonald, Olive Hasenfus, Mary Carew and May Magill.

Nine events in all are carded for tonight's meet, two New England junior title events, the standing broad jump and eight-pound shot put, two sports closed to the members of the municipal gymnasiums 20-yard dash and relay, and five open events. Miss Hasenfus who hails from Needham, and who is a member of the B. S. A., along with her teammate, Florence MacDonald, will compete also in the 220-yard dash with Mary Carew, Katherine Mearis, national and New England indoor broad jump champion, is slated to compete in the standing broad jump.

STARS IN SHOTPUT

Rena MacDonald, national indoor and outdoor shotput champion and one of the quartet who went to the Olympic games from Boston with Florence MacDonald, Olive Hasenfus and Mildred Wiley, will be seen in the eight-pound shot event. Miss Rena MacDonald holds the American record.

Miss Helen Hammersley of the Boston Swimming Association, New England running high jump champion, will compete in her favorite event with junior titleholder, Mary Scully of the Women's Swimming Association of Roxbury. Other good performers will also compete in hopes of wresting the laurels from Miss Hammersley.

SISTERS TO COMPETE

Two leading girl athletes, Sylvia and Mabel Broman, of Brockton, who pushed their way to the front last summer in the outdoor meets, should force the girls to hard competition before the final event of the evening.

All told, there are over 125 entries in the meet tonight. In the 20-yard dash, the committee has the entry blanks of 40 starters. Besides the girls already mentioned, Peggy Maderia of the Boston Swimming Association and former Canadian champion sprinter; Thelma Fields, Viola Field, Gladys Norris, Mary Scully, Clara Wallenberg, Rosalind Barbarosa, all of the Women's Swimming Association of Brookline and eight members of the Acme A. C., will compete in this event.

The meet will be handled mostly by women officials from the committee on women's athletics of the New England A. A. U. Park Commissioner William P. Long is expected to be on hand, while Mayor James M. Curley has also been invited to attend.

Healey to Train Whitney Stable

New York, Jan. 6—Thomas J. Healey has been signed as head trainer for the Harry Payne Whitney stable, one of the most extensive in the country.

Healey, who has been handling thoroughbreds for 40 years, is to take charge of the Whitney stable on February 1. It is understood that James Rowe, Jr., who has handled the Whitney thoroughbreds since the death of his father, James Rowe, Sr., last August, will be Healey's chief assistant.

Healey was trainer for the late R. T. Wilson for many years.

CALDER MAY BE SUPPLANTED

Calder, by stating that they had been unable to reach an agreement for Phillips, and that the deal was off. However, as soon as Hexmer's signature had been affixed to a Ranger contract, Col. Hammond against opened negotiations with Frank Patrick for Vancouver Bill, and notified Calder to that effect, first by telephone conversation, and later by letter.

During a conversation with Col. Hammond in Atlantic City, President Calder did not deny the telephone conversation concerning Phillips, but told the New York manager in further event of his negotiations. However, according to reports, Calder has denied ever receiving written notice from Col. Hammond to the effect that the Rangers were again working on Phillips.

According to the constitution of the N. H. L., the president of that organization must notify every club immediately any player has been placed on the negotiating list of any club in the league.

As no notice had been received by any club regarding Phillips, the Rangers were still busily engaged trying to agree on a price, when the announcement came out that the Windsor Hockey Club of the Canadian pro league had purchased this player from Patrick for $10,000.

Phillips' stay in Windsor was short, very short, in and out and he is now with the Montreal Maroons.

The Phillips case as it now stands is a parallel in the George Owen mixup and the President Calder rules as he did when the Maple Leafs protested that Owen was their property, he must award Phillips to the Rangers and the Maroons will forfeit their $10,000

Bayard Warren Hunt's Steward

Bayard Warren of Beverly Farms, one of the best known amateur horsemen in the country and president of the American Sealyham Terrier Club, was elected to the board of stewards of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association at its annual meeting here. He will serve until December 31, 1932, along with Joseph E. Davis and F. S. von Stade.

The officers elected for the current year were Henry W. Bull, president, J. E. Widener, vice president; F. S. von Stade, honorary secretary and treasurer; Frank J. Bryan, secretary; W. Frazier Taylor, assistant secretary; Frank J. Bryan also was elected official handicapper for flat racing.

Shires Promises Daly a Sound Thrashing

CHICAGO, Jan. 6 (AP)—The only interest Charles Arthur (the Great) Shires had in the boxing business today was to clear himself of charges of having participated in a fixed fight and attempting to fix another.

The great one, with a yearning to get a contract to play first base for the White Sox and withdraw from boxing, awaited a summons from the Illinois State Athletic commission to give an explanation of charge that Dangerous Dan Daly, of Cleveland had "taken a dive" for him in Shires' first professional fight at the White City auditorium last week.

Already under the ban of the Michigan Boxing Commission and the National Boxing Association, pending investigation of a charge that a representative of his had attempted to fix his scheduled engagement with one Battling Criss at Detroit last week, Shires' enemy was increased by a claim purported to have been made by Daly that the latter had taken a dive.

WENT INTO TANK.

The latter charge was made by Daly, according to an interview printed in the Ohio State Journal of Columbus, O., yesterday. Daly, the story said, had "gone into the tank" for Shires, because he feared being "taken for a ride" if he failed to yield to the request made by a Shires representative.

Promoter Jim Mullen, Shires and Eddie Meade of Cleveland, who brought Daly to Chicago for the fight, all vigorously denied knowing anything about attempts to fix the bout.

Shires agreed that Daly had taken a dive, but insisted the plunge was induced by a short right to the chin.

"I never imagined I'd be willing to fight again for nothing," Shires said, "but if I ever meet Daly or Gerry or whatever his name is I'll slap him down without mercy and there won't be any admission charge."

MAY ARREST DALY.

Major-General John J. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, indicated life suspension for the promoter, fighters and referee connected in the affair if the charges are proven.

Promoter Mullen said he would ask the commission to request a warrant for Daly's arrest, then if the fighter wished to repeat the charges, he should be compelled to make affidavit.

FANS ROOTING FOR McCOY TO WIN

Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg of Providence, most colorful heavyweight wrestling star in the history of the game, will defend his title in the Arena Thursday night against Bob "Bibber" McCoy of Cambridge.

Promoter Paul Bowser has been staging wrestling bouts in Boston for many years, but he declared that in all his experience as a promoter, he had never seen such a reaction as greeted the announcement that McCoy was to meet Sonnenberg for the title.

"I thought the customers were wild to see Sonnenberg against Lewis in their first match, and I thought that they went wild about the Sonny Malewicz match," he said, "but this bout has surprised me. McCoy has been begging for the chance to meet Gus. I told him that if he went well against Jack Ganson that I'd match him with Sonnenberg. He brought the house down with his showing. I matched him with Sonnenberg right away; announced the match then and there; and for fully 40 minutes we were taking orders for reservations."

McCoy apparently has an even larger body of friends in Greater Boston than Sonnenberg, for whole blocks of tickets have been ordered from Cambridge, where Bibber was born and bred; from Somerville, where he played for the Bibber team last fall; from Arlington and every suburb in Greater Boston.

The former Holy Cross star will continue his intensive training this afternoon at Toland's Gym. A clean-living youngster, he is always in superb condition, but he expects to be in the best condition of his career when he matches his wits and wrestling tricks against the famous flying tackle of the doughty little Sonnenberg.

Promoter Bowser has lined up an attractive card of preliminary events. In the semi-final bout Henri Digiano undefeated champion of France, will meet Count Zarnoff of Russia, and in the shorter preliminaries, George Kotsanaros, Greek champion, will be paired with Joe Rogacks of Poland. Freddy Meyers of Chicago with Harry Mammus, the Springfield wildman; Ed George, sensational young University of Michigan luminary, with John Pudobbny of Russia; and Jack Sherry, Ohio heavyweight champion, with Bob Wilkie of Buffalo.

COURT RULES TO BE EXPLAINED

Ed Wachter, Harvard basketball coach, gives a demonstration and interpretation of basketball tomorrow at the Memorial high school building, Townsend and Warren sts., Roxbury.

This affair was arranged by the committee on basketball, department of Extended Use of Public Schools. The court teams which play at the same building in the Hub should benefit considerably.

More than 1000 lads are in action on the courts under the supervision of the school center department. Most of these lads are to be at the big exhibition.

The plan of the school department is to allow the boys to get a complete knowledge of the play and rules of the court game and consequently raise the standard of amateur basketball throughout the city of Boston.

Tech Six Seeks First Win Over Harvard

LINEUP AT GARDEN TONIGHT

HARVARD		M. I. T.
Wood, Cross, lw		rw, Cullinan, Fahey
Putnam, Harding, c		c, Lucey, Cochrane
Stubbs, Lakin, rw		lw, Hall, Reagan
Batchelder, Cunningham, ld		rd, Peterson, Wizzinski
Garrison, rd		ld, Hazeltine
Draper, g		g, Riley

A TIRED and battered Harvard hockey team, with Junie Stubbs missing from the lineup, will meet M. I. T. at the Garden tonight.

Not once in the 13 times that the Crimson and the Engineers clashed has Tech been a winner. But tonight with a fast, skilful and well balanced outfit Coach Stewart is looking for a win for Tech. The Engineer sextet is composed entirely of veterans.

RILEY TECH'S BEST BET

This Riley, by the way, is Tech's biggest bet for a victory tonight. A veteran goal guard for the past three seasons this kid has an uncanny way of stopping almost impossible shots.

Harvard's spares will see plenty of service tonight. The regular six is sure to show signs of the two gruelling tussles which they staged with Toronto, and the subs may be the deciding factor in tonight's game.

For spares Coach Joe Stubbs of Harvard will use Johnny Cross in place of Wood in left wing, Lakin in place of Harding on the other wing, and probably Guy Holbrook in place of Putnam.

GARRISON SHOWS CLASS

Harvard's outstanding puckster this season has been Johnny Garrison, whose work in the second till with Toronto was the one bright spot in a rather dull evening for Harvard.

Garrison as a former forward, recently revamped into a hard checking defense man, is making a name for himself with the Cantabs. He weighs only 175, but body checks like a player built on the lines of Primo Carnera.

Johnny is also a puck carrier of better than average ability. He travels fast on the runners and has many solos for points to his credit this season.

GOLDEN GLOVE BOUTS TONIGHT

ments of the show may come in the 100 pounds class McCarthy is a top-notch favorite to win the decision, because of his long series of spectacular knockouts, but John Sweeney of South Boston will have a rooting section of 300 friends who will occupy seats solely for the purpose of seeing him knock out McCarthy. They think he can do it. He thinks he can do it, and the big brawl of the tournament may come off when they strike their fighting pose.

Vernon Merlin of Roslindale Yankee Division champion of 1928 and 1929, will give Charlie Kelly, Fred Rich and Chris DeRosa a busy afternoon in the 147 pounds class, and the 135 pounds division, featuring Dean Crosi of Milford, Vito Alinano of Everett, Victor Lotti of Marlboro and Joe Silvia of Taunton is a toss-up.

Discoverer of Joe Gans Is Dead

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 6 (AP)—Abraham L. (Al) Herford, discoverer and manager of the late Joe Gans, famous negro lightweight boxing champion of the world at one time, died at his home here today after an illness of more than a year. He was 63 years old.

He discovered Gans, a fish cleaner, in a First street market near his sporting club, and trained and managed him until he won the title from Frank Erne in less than one round at the International Athletic Club at Fort Erie, Can., May 12, 1902.

Herford, with his brother, organized the Eureka Athletic Club in Baltimore, 1900, which was his star attraction, brought many greats of the boxing ring of that day to Baltimore.

Races Again

HEAVYWEIGHTS TOP MAT CARD

Two of the most important heavyweight wrestling bouts to be staged around these parts in months will be presented to New England mat fans at the Mechanics Building Wednesday night, when Promoter Billy Lavery will put five all-star matches on display.

The two feature attractions will bring together Jim McMillen and Jim Londos and George Calza and Hans Steinke. There is considerable at stake in both matches. Promoter Avery has promised the winner of the London-McMillen go a bout with the champion, Dick Shikat, here early next month, while Calza and Steinke have Philadelphia and New York bouts pending on the outcome of Wednesday's bouts.

McMillen, one of the most popular grapplers to show here in years, will be meeting his most real crucial test of his brilliant four year career.

The former University of Illinois All-American grid star, one of the greatest tackles in western conference history, has never found such a slippery opponent as Londos, unquestionably one of the finest wrestlers of all time.

Three other bouts are on the card. In the third battle Carl Pojello, the Lithuanian favorite, goes to the mat against John Paxo, the Greek sensation, who tossed Charley Fox in his debut here last week. The second tilt will find Kola Kwariana opposing Buck Olson and in the opener Pat Conlon, the Irish hero, meets Mike Romana, the Italian.

Macks to Play 33 Spring Games

Philadelphia, Jan. 6 (AP)—The world's champion Athletics will play 33 exhibition games this spring before the regular major league baseball season opens and these opponents will be five National League teams, four members of the International League and one of the American Association. Eight games will be played in Miami and six at Fort Meyers.

The Athletics' training base will be Fort Meyers. The pitchers and catchers will leave Philadelphia February 22, and the infielders and outfielders will follow on February 27.

Won State Title

CATHOLIC H. S. FIVES IN ACTION

BASKETBALL teams of the Catholic High School League swing into action on Wednesday. The opening games mark the first court contests of the six schools now represented in the rapidly growing circuit.

Mission Church high of Roxbury plays at Cathedral high of Boston; Our Lady high, Newton, goes to St. Mary's high, Brookline, and Immaculate Conception of Revere plays at St. Clement's, Somerville.

All of these teams are without any experience, and as this is their initial year on the courts they have very few players of ability. Their coaches have been working, the boys hard and several of the squads have shown remarkable progress.

Bernie Sidrow of St. Mary's has one of his football players of last fall on the quintet. His team should make the best of the league flives atep before the season is over.

All the games of the league are scheduled for Wednesdays, starting this week, and continuing without a break until March 12, when the final league plays of the season are played.

Here is the remainder of the Catholic High School League basketball schedule for 1930: January 15—Cathedral at Our Lady; St. Clement's at Mission; St. Mary's at Immaculate Conception.

January 22—Cathedral at St. Clement's; Mission at St. Mary's; Our Lady at Immaculate Conception.

February 5—Immaculate Conception at Cathedral; Mission at Our Lady's; St. Mary's at St. Clement's.

February 12—Cathedral at Mission; St. Mary's at Our Lady's; St. Clement's at Immaculate Conception.

February 19—Our Lady at Cathedral; Mission at St. Clement's; Immaculate Conception at St. Mary's.

February 26 — St. Clement's at Cathedral; St. Mary's at Mission; Immaculate Conception at Our Lady.

March 5—St. Mary's at Cathedral; Mission at Immaculate Conception; Our Lady at St. Clement's.

March 12 — Cathedral at Immaculate Conception; Our Lady at Mission; St. Clement's at St. Mary's.

The football schedule of the Catholic high school league also has been released. Four teams were in the grid wars of the league last fall, but this year's list shows six teams operating.

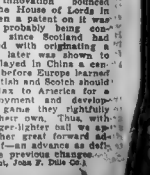
St. John's high of North Cambridge is in the grid section of the circuit. The Cambridge school has the championship baseball team of the league last spring, and has enough football material to produce a capable team.

The football schedule of the league for 1930 sends six teams into action on Oct. 13. St. Mary's vs. Immaculate Conception; Mission vs. St. John's; Cathedral vs. St. Clement's, Oct. 20, Cathedral vs. St. Mary's; St. John's vs. St. Clement's; Immaculate Conception vs. Mission, Nov. 3, St. Mary's vs. Mission; Immaculate Conception vs. St. John's; Mission vs. Cathedral, Nov. 11, Mission vs. St. Mary's; Cathedral vs. St. John's; Immaculate Conception vs. St. Clement's; Nov. 22, Cathedral vs. Immaculate Conception; Mission vs. St. Clement's, Nov. 27, St. Clement's vs. St. Mary's; St. John's vs. Immaculate Conception

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

The feather-stuffed golf ball was used until 1848, and today they are worth from $75 to $100 each—if you happen to have one. The gutta percha ball was introduced and adopted and the most important change in golf balls since, for years, as it was then played, was a scored ball, and the present rubber-core ball was introduced in 1902.



GOLF ORIGINATED IN CHINA

The gutta percha ball was a development of the ancient game by an American inventor, Coburn Haskell. He began his experiments in 1898 and in 1902 the rubber-core ball, American creation, was adopted as official, and as late as 1907 this American innovation bounced around in the houses of Lords of England when a patent on it was contested. Golf probably being considered that since Scotland had been credited with originating a form of a game they rightfully felt to be their own. Thus, with the new larger-lighter ball we approach another great forward advance in golf—an advance as definite as these previous changes.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

WHEN the hair is wet it is best to dry it first with a towel and then to finish the drying process in the sun. The sun contains so-called "actinic" rays which are very beneficial to the hair. It also aids in cleaning; it as clothes are whitened on the line in the back yard.

WOMAN WITH A JOB HAS NO TIME FOR 'BLUES'

She Keeps Her Loveliness and Charm to End

By MARIA JERITZA

IF it is true—and undoubtedly it is —that "all work and no play make Jack a dull boy," it is equally true that the all-work program makes Jill a very dull, uninteresting girl.

Work, it is true, is essential to the mental and physical health of every woman, hence essential also to her charm and beauty, which are the bloom of health

Maria Jeritza

The woman with a job that keeps her busy has no time for the vapors and the blues. She has an object, an ambition in life, that takes her thoughts off herself. And we all know that the great secret of charm is to keep the thoughts turned out from the ego, away from self.

Women who are busy forget their grievances, their troubles, real and imaginary, and form habits of regularity and energetic, systematic effort, which bring about in turn healthy fatigue at night, so that life becomes a rhythm of hearty, energetic work, followed by sound sleep and rest.

But a third factor is needed to complete this harmonious rhythm of healthful, beautiful living—hearty play, wholesome fun, good times.

Too much work brings on over fatigue. While in this condition a woman's beauty droops like a fading flower. Her skin crinkles with fine lines, her eyes and hair grow dull, her steps drag, her wit is dulled—she loses her charm. She finds it hard to sleep when the chance comes to relax and rest. Joyful recreation is needed as well as sleep and relaxation to fully overcome fatigue brought on by hard work.

Persons of cheerful disposition remain young. They hold their looks and usually live long. A dear hope fulfilled has more than once transformed a plain woman to one of pronounced charm and even beauty.

A game of cards, an interesting play or movie, dancing under wholesome surroundings, your favorite outdoor sport, good music, perhaps tea and a chat with a friend, reading of a good book—each and all of these may be just what you need as a bracing mental tonic and a stimulant to your good looks.

It has been said of a certain nation that they take their pleasures sadly. That sad, depressed quality of mind is not conducive to health, charm or beauty. Life may be hard and stern, but there is always an amusing side, a light side, a humorous side which will help you to laughter and a sane perspective.

Do you know that laughter is in itself a deep-breathing exercise, which, physiologists will tell you, produces an increase of vital activity by heightening nervous stimulation and giving a sense of increased energy and high tide of the fullnes of the life current.

You need to laugh heartily and well every day. If you can't think of anything worth laughing at, try the exercise of laughing. Take a deep breath, hold it an instant, then inhale with sharp, explosive sounds of broad "a" as in "artist." Next, breathing deeply, let your laughter ripple out on the vowel "oh."

Before long your purely mechanical laugh is likely to change to one of genuine amusement at your own effort, and, in any event, you will have learned a deep-breathing exercise which if practiced before an open window just before retiring should send you to bed prepared to relax and slip quickly into dreamless slumber.

Laughter will give animation to your eyes and keep your mouth pretty and your heart warm, cheery and kindly. Cultivate the art of good-humored laughter.

Gloriette Wears All Her Holiday Gifts at Once

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

GLORIETTE recovers from her holiday daze, thinks over all the beautiful things that people said to her on cards without gifts, all the generous cards that came with gifts, thanked the people that loved her—in her thoughts—and decided to take the wistful request on the cards of Aunts and Uncles, Dad and Mom, elderly cousins and those not at all elastic yet, that begged, in one fashion or another, that she "WEAR THEM," and did it.

The result amazed Cupid, who had always thought Gloriette a young person of decided taste, who never wore more than two matching pieces of jewelry at once, and who made simplicity a deity to the point of seal-like sleekness! Said he; "Well, well, young woman, you certainly did well for yourself this Yule-tide. But if you are going to look like this for long it's going to be difficult to dispose of you! Young men have learned to have a warm eye for simplicity of line, even though they cast a cold one on simplicity of living. You have emerged from Christmas-time looking like a young Esquimau on her way to a Maharajah's ball!"

"Never mind," said Gloriette, round-eyed, dazzled, waving a gift feather fan, "I haven't any time for you just now, anyway. You can come around later."

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HENRY FORD doesn't believe that women will ever amount to much in industry. He says that they "don't want to think much on industrial matters" and that the place for them is in the home. All of which he broadcasts in the October issue of Pictorial Review.

Elsie Robinson

I wonder! I'm thinking back, across thousands of years, to the time when WOMEN HAD A CORNER ON ALL INDUSTRY. Men were the hunters, the warriors, the adventurers . . . men killed the mammoth, and trapped the tiger . . . BUT IT WAS THE WOMAN WHO, BY HER SKILL AND TOIL, TURNED THOSE PELTS INTO GARMENTS, RUGS AND TEPEES.

It was women who collected the acorns and ground the meal, jerked the meats and dried the roots, made the garments, and invented simpler medicines and soaps, wove baskets, baked pottery, spun, dyed and wove wool, built houses . . . AND CONSTANTLY INVENTED BETTER PROCESSES FOR DOING THESE THINGS. If you want to see such a programme still going on, study the Hopi Indians of Arizona. Who's the Going Business there? Mama!

Yet Mr. Ford says that women are not inventive . . . have no initiative . . . think very little . . . do not like to make decisions. You won't need to journey to Arizona to disprove most of those statements. No initiative? Not like to make decisions? Who persuaded John Henry to quit that pleasure office job he's had for years and go into the garage business? Who decides that they've got to take a chance and buy that corner lot for investment? The thousand-times-removed granddaughter of the ladies who sent the Huns hurtling south because they wanted better chances for their babies!

Nor was this industry and initiative forced on women by males. IT WAS THE TRUE NATURAL EXPRESSION OF THEIR OWN NATURES. Women created THINGS as naturally as they created BABIES. They were the creative sex . . . men were the adventurous sex when invention and trial and experimented . . . but women MADE. Every home was a factory.

Then gradually man's trading propensity increased until he formulated it into an organized business. He contrived ways of doing things faster than women could do them. He conceived mass production. And presently, to increase his power and wealth, he pitched from the home the very crafts that had made that home a factory and given women HER industrial importance . . . the washing and sewing, the cooking and weaving. So man established a MAN-factoring program . . . but with characteristic male egotism, he ignored the fact that WOMAN-factoring was a going concern long before the first man swung a string of wampum for a jar of salt.

And now Mr. Ford thinks that women are unfitted for industry and should stay in the home! But what has man left of that home which used once the industrial center of the community? Four walls and a vacuum cleaner. Is that not a full-sized career for a lady with the blood of a million two-fisted squaws in her veins? Yes, it is not.

In common with many other gentlemen, Mr. Ford deplores the restlessness of the modern woman and her demand for a job. But there is nothing abnormal about that restlessness. It is not a sick sign of the times. She is only demanding that which was once hers by natural right

Women WANTED Industry . . . men merely COMMERCIALIZED it.

On Wedding Gifts

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please let me know if it would be proper to give a wedding present to a draughtsman in the company I work for (where I am employed as office boy), who is getting married within the next month? He has been very nice to me and has helped me on several occasions with my work in the office. Therefore, am wondering if I should give him a personal gift in order to show my appreciation for his willingness to always help me? As the office force always makes a collection for a gift perhaps it would not be proper for me to give him a personal gift, as I would not want to embarrass him—he is eleven years older than I.

While I am friendly with this chap, I haven't met the girl, but expect to meet her before the wedding.

I am, therefore, writing to ask if you think I should give him a personal gift, or just be included with the rest of the employes in the collection for a gift from the company? W. Z. F.

UNDER the circumstances, I think that it would be especially generous and thoughtful and appropriate for you to give this man, who has been so kind to you, a personal wedding gift, something for himself. Then, too, make your contribution to the general fund for the wedding present that is to be sent to the bride-to-be.

BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for "Best Joke" published. Address "Best Joke," Boston Evening American Young Romeo—I can't see how you get into that bathing suit!

Beach Siren—You're darned right, you can't.

MRS. D. MARSHALL,
423 Mass ave., Boston.

Miss Pat -:- Thrilling Romance of Airways

Bryce mustn't get the notes before 10.

"Ten-thirty—so far so good! Elliott lying doped in the hills, ransom note in Bryce's hands. Gave package to a bum with $5 and asked while he tossed it on counter of Western Union. Picked up Effie and sauntered home. Dick stopped us. So they're on! Police must have phoned station here to have me watched. My car is in the garage. Can they guess how? I'll get back to Salada Beach and grab the ransom by midnight?

"Then-thirty-five—Dick watching. I've undressed. Left the shades up. In five minutes I'll be sneaking out the alley—then to Slim's, drive off in my fruit wagon to reach the flume. Jim, do your part!

"Twelve-fifty—I've won! Twenty-thousand dollars on the mattress over there. At exactly 12 15, Jim, the marvel, came trotting from the flume and dropped the ransom box at my feet in the thicket. I tied him to a stake with a box of bones, made my getaway down the flume. Went jogging off in my fruit wagon—$20,000 tossed with the potatoes. At Colma dumped the vegetables, drove truck to Slim's, sneaked back here.

"One o'clock—door bell is ringing. They're checking up. Get into my nightshirt. Bell ringing furiously.

"One-fifteen — narrow squeak. Dicks wanted to make sure I was in bed. Poor Effie! With one of her rare flashes she came over and put a hand on my arm. She asked them bewilderedly: 'Must you take him?' Tomorrow the strain will be over.

"Here's our schedule—They wait in desert until ransom is secured. Tomorrow—Saturday at noon Slim will register at the Harvey House in Barstow under name of James [illegible]. At 1:30 I phone with this code message: 'Mr. Ellis I can't accept your offer. I'm satisfied with my job here.' This means I've pulled it off perfectly.

"Just after dark Shaik smuggles the kid to the room Slim has hired. They put him to sleep, leave orders for maid not to disturb them. At 2 tomorrow I start the drive down to Barstow. Should arrive there Sunday morning 7:30. I hand over ransom to Shaik and Slim pocket it, deliver kid to me and skip for Los Angeles. Sunday morning the kid will be asleep. I finish him. With my last breath I phone Bryce that his child lies dead in Tom Burns' arms.

"Saturday morning—Papers are on fire with ransom news. Great mystery. Neither Elliott nor Jim has been found.

"Two o'clock—I've phoned Barstow. Slim hasn't registered.

"Three o'clock—Phoned again. Where are they? What's happened?

"Five o'clock—They've not arrived! They've flivvered somewhere!

"Six o'clock . . . My sister has come for dinner. We talk of the kidnaping. I'm going to use Rose without her knowledge. I've written a torture-letter. Let Bryce drink it up.

"Seven o'clock—I've asked Rose to send my letter from Berkeley special delivery tomorrow morning. She's very reluctant but I tell her it's just an anonymous sermon to Bryce. She consents.

Saturday, nine o'clock . . . I've phoned Barstow again. They've not made it!

"Sunday — Extras are out. They've come upon Elliott and Jim.

"Monday—I went to work Oh this ghastly waiting! Noon—I phone Harvey House, Barstow. No response. All ruined. I fear. But Elliott is identified as kidnaper.

"Tuesday—Elliott's story of the woman who gave him orders is flashed in all headlines. I m keeping the papers from Effie.

"Six o'clock—Someone has told Effie about the woman in the case. I came home and found her poring over the newspapers. She watched them quickly and gave me a frightened awful look. She said nothing. But she suspects.

"Tuesday, 4 o'clock . . . The girl has radioed! She's radioed from the Grand Canyon. I see the climax.

"Midnight—Elliott's free. He's in broken jail. Is thought to have taken a plane and gone to the girl Morning papers got out early with the news.

"Wednesday—I can't endure Effie's presence. The look in her eyes. Like a hurt animal I've sent her to visit her sister. She thinks I'm demented.

"Six o'clock—Elliott's reached them. He's sent back word. He's taken Slim and Montgomery prisoner. We're all smoked. The girl and the kid aren't found. They won't be! Has Bryce ever looked into Slim's eyes? The coldest scoundrel that ever breathed. The kid and the girl are finished. That's why they're not in sight.

"Six-thirty—I'm arranging articles on the table here in my dungeon. I'm burning up papers—little greenbacks—nice $20 bills. This will be a sweet gift to William Bryce! I'm making out my will.

"Seven—I'm going out now and send a message to the paper—to that editor who tried to set me right . . . get me freed in time. I'll take a last look about.

"Seven-thirty—I wonder if the pain is great. If it lasts long I've made myself a cup of coffee. All must be finished before the reporters arrive. I hear machines. It can't be them coming . . . not yet I've taken up the blade and tried it on my wrist. It cuts—there's a swift trickle of blood. I mix this with the mound of ashes. I feel nothing. I slash the other wrist. This will make the end come more quickly.

"Now I lie on the mattress I touch the razor to my throat. Effie—good-bye."

Nine o'clock Tuesday night. William Bryce sat with the morning mail of Tom Burns before him. He wouldn't look in his daughter's eyes. Nor dared either of the two women ask the questions that sucked the hope and the life from their hearts.

Wait—they could only wait.

Some time tomorrow Guy would send the word.

The Real Truth

ABOUT BEING PRUDENT

By ELINOR GLYN

BY the time you receive this, girls, Christmas will have had you a very busy day.

Elinor Glyn

Each year we all of us hope for better things, and some of us get them—if we are wise and prudent! Did you ever think what prudent really means?

It is to look ahead and calculate what your present course of action is likely to bring you, and if it looks as though it might not be a pleasant return, change your action if you can, or at all events be prepared for the consequences of your bad judgment.

"Prudent" also means to plan for pleasant things. You will be going to all kinds of parties, think out what will be the most becoming garments to wear, according to your means, and how much enjoyment you can secure without hurting others.

Some girls take a delight in snatching their friends' beaux. They think it adds to their own importance, but if they stopped to realize what suffering they cause they would not enjoy doing it.

When girls are very young these small angulshes seem like big griefs, and I know, Gracie and Maud, you would not willingly make anyone unhappy.

I saw a girl deliberately entice her best friend's admirer away from her only a week ago, and I wondered then if she had ever heard of the law of the boomerang or knew what she would be drawing to herself.

The inexorable return sometimes comes when least expected and hits out happiness. Don't forget this, girls, when you are tempted to poach!

Value of Hypnotism

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M. D., Ph. D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

CONSIDERABLE confusion seems to exist in some people's minds regarding hypnotism.

A few believe it's all a myth and simply can't be done.

Dr. L. E. Bisch

Others view that hypnotism is not a myth, but only weak-minded persons can be brought under its influence.

There is absolutely no question about hypnotism being an actuality!

In fact sometimes it is a valuable adjunct in the treatment of nervous and mental diseases and not infrequently it is so employed.

Whether a person can be hypnotised has nothing whatever to do with the strength of his will power.

If anything, the person with a strong will can be more easily hypnotised than one who is weak, because the speed of hypnosis, and its depth, largely depends upon concentration of attention.

Another prevalent fallacy is that people can be hypnotised against their wills.

That is not true. Nobody can be hypnotised unless he deliberately submits to the procedure.

Suggestion and hypnosis are not identical.

We receive suggestions and believe what we want to believe continually throughout the waking state. Hypnotism, however, is a definite and controlled method, step by step, with a very definite purpose in mind.

Psychoanalysis and hypnosis are not identical either, as some think.

In psychoanalysis the causes for the subject's feelings and behavior are explained in detail and he is asked to accept nothing unless it appears to his reasoning.

In hypnotism reasoning is left out of account. The subject, having come under the influence of the operator, is forced to accept an explanation whether he wants to or not.

Hypnotism has its dangers because it all depends upon a trick or two and most anyone can learn how to do it.

Furthermore, although it is sometimes useful in tiding over a patient in an emergency—acute insomnia, for example—its permanent curative effects are not so likely to be lasting because the fundamental character of the individual is not changed.

Hypnotism is now thing nor is healing by auto-suggestion as expounded by the late Coue, whose visit to Boston some years after the war created such a stir

Wise doctors for years had practiced different forms of suggestion in order to produce a hopeful attitude in their patients, all conducive to more speedy recovery But hypnotism, as such, as well as auto-suggestion, seems to have had its vogue and there are few who actually practice it nowadays for therapeutic purposes Every patient knows that if he has confidence in the doctor who is treating him he is more likely to get well, and more rapidly, too, than if he feels doubtful of the physician's ability, dislikes his personality or for some other reason bears him an attitude of resistance.

Suggestion plays a part in auto attitude and doctors would do well to note them and try to remove them if they are interfering with the patient's progress.

Household Hints

Keep silver bright by adding about three tablespoonfuls of borax to a bowl of hot water and leaving the silver in it for some hours.

If an egg has a very thin shell or is chipped and likely to crack when being boiled, add a few drops of vinegar to the water.

Chocolate stains may be removed by sprinkling with borax and soaking in cold water.

To make your winter boots quite waterproof, tip about a quarter of a pint of linseed oil in each boot. Stand them on a tray and in about a week the oil will have soaked right through the soles and to the top of the uppers.

LITCHFIELD TO BE SPEAKER IN BOSTON

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

President P. W. Litchfield of Goodyear Tire will address Boston Chamber of Commerce members January 16. Comparatively few people know that the man who has been head of the world's largest rubber company since 1926 was born in Boston. Mr. Litchfield was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has been with Goodyear about 20 years. He is a keen student of aeronautics, with special interest in lighter-than-air carriers.

Large financial corporations, including investment trusts, have been busy compiling reports for 1929. Their workers have been compiling tables showing losses or gains as shown in differences between purchase price and final quotations on the year. When you read the results, remember they show only paper profits or losses. The dividends on the vast majority ity of the issues are either as high or better than when purchases were made; this is assured by the big flood of dividend actions which featured December.

New high approval of the investment trust idea is proven by the action of American Tobacco in having Union Tobacco, virtually its subsidiary, continue its investment company in expectation of an appreciation in the stocks which it holds.

• • •

J. R. Goddard & Co., Federal st. investment bankers, are extending their branch offices by the opening today of a new branch in Springfield. It is in charge of A. E. Gibbs, long a prominent leader in the New England piano industry.

New York financial writer says today of former Massachusetts State Bank Commissioner Chapin: "A. H. Chapin, president of American Trust Co. of Boston, tells of his interesting incidents while he was taking for six weeks recently at Florence, Italy, and Rome. Although solely on pleasure bent Mr. Chapin harkened the ambition to meet and talk with the Italian chief, Mussolini, and fortified himself with a letter of introduction from a prominent Italian here to an equally prominent figure in Italy. Presentation of the letter procured in exchange one to one of Il Duce's secretaries who persisted in the question, 'What is your purpose?' A second explanation brought the answer that the chief was busy and that arrangements would be made if possible. Mr. Chapin to be advised the next day."

A call the next day by the secretary again brought up the question of the Boston banker's specific reason for desiring to meet the head of the government. Again the answer that the visitor anticipated considerable pleasure in talking with the internationally prominent figure. A Boston banker? Would he aid in obtaining a $5,000,000 loan for a certain Italian city? No. Would he help in securing a $15,000,000 loan for some Italian industry there? No, pleasure, not business, is the purpose of the banker's visit, the secretary officio. Would he subscribe his aid to placing a $30,000,000 agricultural loan? No. Would he subscribe to see Il Duce at his home or office? Either. Well, next day he would be told what arrangement could be made. But "next day" never dawned.

Boston Banker Chapin found it mixed easier to get audience with Pope Pius XI. and speaks of the latter as an impressive figure, of genial, strong, kindly personality.

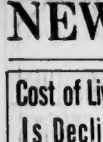
Cost of Living Is Declining But Not Much

Investment Trusts Coming Into Open; When to Buy Stocks

—By B. C. FORBES—

NEW YORK Jan. 6—The cost of living is declining a little. Such foodstuffs as flour, sugar, meats, coffee, butter, fowls, fruits, potatoes, are now bringing growers much less on prices that any drastic decline is likely to be experienced. Some other basic commodities notably cotton, rubber, leather, are also substantially lower than a year ago.



B. C. Forbes

Basically, if the change at all, are likely to creep downward temporarily. That observation also applies to wages.

But the general disposition will be to keep both wages and living costs on as even a keel as possible. It is better sensed today than ever before that, in the interest of everybody, it is best that prosperity be spread out.

New York gets its second two-billion-dollar bank at the time California gets its third billion-dollar bank. William C. Potter and Charles E. Sabin are responsible for the two-billion Guaranty Trust Co., while the redoubtable A. P. Giannini is responsible for the Bank of Italy and its many affiliations in California and across the continent.

After having stepped aside temporarily to make room for Seward S. Alexander, formerly head of the absorbed National Bank of Commerce, Mr. Sabin resumes the chairmanship of the Guaranty. Sabin was the man who reined the Guaranty from small to great stature even before the war—he made it the largest trust company in the land.

"Sign of Progress," as western utility companies placard barriers when they dig up a street. Pres. W. L. Mellon of the Gulf Oil Corp. and of the famous Mellon family of Pittsburgh tells me, "I am pleased to note the cash expenditures in new additions to plants by the Gulf Oil Corp. and its subsidiaries in 1929 at about $60,000,000."

Walter Teagle, head of the biggest oil company of them all, Standard of New Jersey, has such monster plans up his sleeve that he hesitates to give out an estimate of how much may be spent this year. All oil companies, indeed, cross over-production and low prices, are not broke, by any means. Many shares are climbing the Wall Street earthquake better than most others.

Neither Melvin T. Traylor nor Jackson E. Reynolds, who went to Europe today to put finishing touches on the Bank of International Settlements, is particularly likely to accept the job of running the institution. Each enjoys high position at home. Besides, they are intensely American, with no aspirations for becoming shining lights in titled European circles. Both are ex-farm boys whose heads have not been turned by their new power and wealth; any more than the author of the Young Plan (Owen D., also an ex-farmer) has allowed his head to be turned.

Shares in most investment trusts suffered terribly during the panic. Some of them actually sold for less than the amount of cash in the bank on deposit against them. Efforts are now being made by the better managed companies to stage a comeback by frankly presenting facts.

Prince & Whitely set an early example by issuing clear-cut financial statements, vouched for by independent auditors, showing exactly how their Trading Corporation stood at different periods during the storm. This allowing made a reassuring impression. A. P. Giannini long ago published a complete list of his investment corporation's holdings. Similar statements are beginning to appear, revealing the December 31st status. Some concerns reveal their detail holdings, others don't.

If investment trusts are to regain public favor they must learn to operate in the dark; must not keep their affairs secret. Even unfavorable facts, when brought to closed, are less disturbing than uncertainty and ugly rumors.

The late J. P. Morgan had accurate vision when he declared that the day was coming when affiliations would have gloss pockets.

Victor M. Cutter of United Fruit is one of the growing number of corporation presidents who send a letter of welcome to each new stockholder and present inspiring facts. United Fruit is "the largest agricultural enterprise in the world." It owns 462,000 acres of improved lands; also, 1,860,000 acres of unimproved lands, over 1440 miles of railways, 650 miles of tramways, 44,800 head of cattle, horses, mules; 70 vessels, six radio stations.

It also owns something Mr. Cutter doesn't mention: excellent management.

President Hernand Behn of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. sent each of his stockholders New Year's greetings by telegram-with the Postal-cost of the affiliations. Nothing like supporting home industries!

Carle C. Conway switched from Bankers to same years ago, because he clearly foresaw that the piano business was on the down-grade, whereas the canning industry was only in its infancy. The appointment of a receiver for the American Piano Co. emphasizes the wisdom of his step. So does the fact that he shortly climbed to the presidency of the Continental Can and has since developed it into the second largest enterprise of its kind in the world and a real rival of American Can, which long held unchallenged sway.

Are you in a waxing or waning industry?

CURB MARKET RALLY ENDS IN DULLNESS

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—Trading was of a transitory and aimless character on the curb market today. The rally late last week was carried over into the early trading, but it petered out before midday, and bear pressure was renewed. The market turned extremely dull on the decline. There was nothing in the week-end news to enliven the market, and the return of 4½ per cent call money today was only in line with expectations.

Some of the copper shares were well bought, in response to reports that the metal output for the first quarter shipment during the past two days approximated 400,000,000 pounds, the most active demand experienced in some time. Newmont made an extreme gain of 7 points, and Noranda was in fair demand.

Stutz was a buoyant spot, rising 2¾ points to 4½, in response to announcement of the dismissal of the bankruptcy petitions. Later, however, it sold off a little on profit taking. The stock jumped to 5 points when the bankruptcy petition was filed. Ford of Canada A was a buoyant uncovered moderate profit taking, while Ford of Canada B, which is closely held, jumped several points in a few sales.

Utilities were firm at the opening, but soon eased. American Gas rose 3 points, then more than lost its gain. Electric Bond & Share mounted a point, then eased. Olio followed a similar course, in less active trading. Gulf gained about 1¾ points before wagging. Cities Service moved in a narrow range. Niles Bement Bond was a strong spot in the industrials, gaining more than 6 points, reflecting more favorable forecasts for aviation and machinery industries.

Goldman Sachs and Third National Investors lost about a point each. Trans-Americas, however, was steady.

MacEwan Secretary of R. C. A.-Victor Co.

E. E. Shumaker, president of R. C. A.-Victor Co., announces the appointment of E. K. MacEwan as secretary of the new company.

Francis S. Kane and Walter H. Hunt become assistant secretaries. Paul G. Mellolium is appointed assistant comptroller, and Robert P. Alexander, Eugene F. Haines and Cornelius G. Terwilliger assistant treasurers.

Mr. MacEwan, the new secretary, has been associated with the Victor Talking Machine Co. since it was incorporated in 1901. He worked in the financial department until 1911 when he became a member of the executive staff, and in 1920 he was appointed secretary of the Victor Talking Maching Co.

McNeel Sees Good Year in Offing

Recession in business is not likely to be as severe or prolonged as is generally expected, according to McNeel's Financial Service in its current business forecast.

McNeel's says: "We expect that 1930, even after its indifferent start, will be a good year. While it is almost too early yet to predict just when improvement will make itself felt, we believe that while the first quarter may be poor, some betterment will be noted in the second quarter of the year, and that the influence of the strong fundamentals, and the President's business program, will be very definitely felt by fall."

American States' Earnings Increase

Net earnings of $820,325, available for interest, sinking fund and dividends for the year ended Nov. 30, 1929, are reported by the American States Public Service Co. This compares with a net of $723,765 for the preceding year, or an increase of $96,557 for the 1929 period. Earnings of the American States Electric Co., subsidiary, are included in these figures.

Public Utilities Ruling Favorable

Washington, Jan. 6 (INS)—Public utilities of the country may be entitled to earn 7 to 8 per cent or more on their investment under some circumstances, the Supreme Court today ruled in a decision of vast importance to state regulatory bodies, investors and consumers alike. The opinion was delivered by Justice Sutherland in the Baltimore street car fare case, in which a ten-cent fare was allowed.

Everett Mills

Everett Mills declared a dividend in liquidation of $15 per share, payable January 15.

HUSTIS is VICE-PRESIDENT OF N. Y. CENTRAL

New York, Jan. 6—The many friends of James H. Hustis, former president of the Boston & Maine Railroad, were pleased to learn that he was back in the New York Central "family" where he began his railroad career. He has been made one time vice-president.

P. E. Crowley and Hustis have been warm friends for many years, and both began their railroad careers in the New York Central service. Hustis was an office boy in the headquarters of the general superintendent of the New York Central at Hudson River Railroad. Crowley then was telegraph operator on the Pennsylvania division of that railroad.

Following successive promotions, Mr. Hustis came over to Boston as vice-president in charge of operation of the Boston & Albany Railroad, with which he made an excellent record. Later he was associated for a time with the New Haven Railroad as vice-president under Edward Brooks, following the resignation of Howard Elliott. From there he was called to the presidency of the Boston & Maine and during the war and government operation of railroads was district director of the New England railroads under A. H. Smith, who was director for the whole eastern region.

On termination of government control, Hustis went back to the Boston & Maine and carried the burden there during some of the most difficult years in that road's history when it was laboring under great financial handicaps.

It is rather significant that after all these years these two old railroaders are again associated in the service of the system with which they started.

STEEL OUTPUT INCREASED

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—Steel production in the Youngstown district this week will be increased to 55 per cent of rated capacity, against 55 per cent last week, operation in December dropped to as low as 40 per cent.

NEW ENGLAND SALES FOUND PROMISING

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 6—Prospects for the wide 1930 adoption of electrical household equipment, and particularly washers, are especially bright in the rural districts of New England, and the larger cities are expected to equal 1929, at least, according to the Wetmore-Savage Electric Supply Co., of this city.

The washer industry is entering its greatest year, based on the New England outlook and a nation-wide survey just reported to the local concern by Silas H. Altorfer, heading the company making ABC washers.

Since distribution is in homes of average earning power, the investigation is regarded as important in revealing national approval of relatively generous household budgets.

"Distributing houses at strategic points confirm the prediction that women of the United States in 1930 will set a new purchasing record of $150,000,000 for 1,000,000 electrical washers, as compared to $129,000,000 for 860,000 in 1929," it was announced.

"The industry is on the best basis in its history," said President Altorfer. "Like others, it was affected by efforts to lower prices and to increase production during extreme competition. Today it has real stability, serving clearly defined fields with machines in appropriate price ranges. Dealers, like manufacturers, have adjusted their plans to fit their markets with greatest benefit and efficiency.

"The farm field was 'debunked' a decade ago. It has been improving ever since. Electrical wiring is spreading fast in it. If retrenchment had to be practiced anywhere in 1930, it would not be needed on the farm, and in the city the washer more than ever would be a means to economy. We are planning accordingly. Doubled volume is expected to result from additions to the line.

"Families received $60,000,000,000 in wages in 1929, spent $40,000,000,000 for home upkeep and had $20,000,000,000 left for such items as washers. More than 10,000,000 of our citizens have annual incomes over $2000. Yearly home construction is up more than 400 per cent since 1920.

LISTS GROUPS WITH GOOD '30 OUTLOOK

The stocks that first pull themselves out of a bear market are always those that represent industries that have a particularly favorable outlook.

This week's United Business Service Report (Boston) contains analyses of four major industries that have exceptionally good earnings prospects for the coming year. Briefly they are as follows:

CHEMICAL—This is a constantly expanding industry with an ever widening field. Stocks are low, demand steady and prices reasonably firm.

TOBACCO PRODUCTS—Total production of cigarettes in 1929 will surpass 120,000,000,000, an increase of 13.2 per cent over 1928. Industry is essentially depression proof and earnings of cigarette manufacturers particularly should show sizable gains in 1930.

PUBLIC UTILITIES—Gas companies should do better than electric during first half of 1930 but long pull outlook for all utilities is for steady gain. Operating economies due to mergers and more modern equipment will bring better earnings.

FINANCIAL NEWS OF WORLD

BOND MARKET PRICES HIGHER IN NEW YORK

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—The bond market was quick to profit today by easing money rates and prices in all groups ruled higher, although trading was still dull. Time loans went to 4½ per cent as compared with the 4¾ to 5 per cent quotations that had held over the holiday period. The renewal rate on call money was 5, but funds were plentiful and the charge soon dropped to 4¾.

Most of the trading was in the better grade issues. United States Government securities enjoyed the broadest market in some time and the same tone which prevailed in this group while money was firm at the seasonal figures had largely disappeared. Rails, utilities and industrials of investment rating shared about equally in the small advances.

There was also an noticeable improvement in numerous low priced issues. Paths of progress were marked up more than 3 points on the publication of a favorable earnings estimate.

Gains of between one and two points developed in a few railroad obligations.

The utilities were rather dull, but had little difficulty in holding their recent levels on the comparatively few sales recorded during the earlier hours. Foreign bonds were likewise firm.

Convertibles traded within a narrow range in the directions moving irregularly and in small volume.

New offerings of the day included a $3,500,000 issue of Saskatchewan 30-year 5s at 100; $7,500,000 Winnipeg serial 5s at 95½, and $1,000,000 Sioux City first mortgage 30-year 5s at 97. The syndicate floating $60,000,000 30-year 5 per cent loan for Insull Utility Investment, Inc., reported that the entire issue had been sold.

COTTON STUDY BY REVERE

C. T. Revere, cotton market authority, writing for Munds & Winslow, says:

Several interesting and intricate problems are involved which are faced by a scarcity of desirable grades and are likely to be compelled to pay a high price for their raw material through an increase in the premium of spot cotton over contracts. The January position now around 17¼ cents, looks as if cotton were cheap, but the mill registering bidding for cotton and paying the premium exacted by the merchant, may take an entirely different view of the situation. Middling inch cotton now commands a premium of about 300 points over March contracts, which would bring the price up to about 19½ cents.

The situation is an ideal one from the standpoint of the merchants who has been farsighted enough to obtain a fairly large amount of desirable cotton and who has sold contracts against it. He is amply protected and at the moment has every reason to believe that his gains through an increase in the premium of the actual over contracts will give him a handsome profit in the "basis."

Just how domestic cotton manufacturers and importing interests will extricate themselves from this position is a problem that can be solved only by future developments. The effect of this state of affairs on the contract market also is problematical. At present, it looks as if a rise in contract prices would not inure particularly to the benefit of the merchant who has hedged cotton as it probably merely would increase the buying requisition on the part of the consuming manufacturer.

At the recent inquiry in Washington there was an effort on the part of several witnesses to lay the blame for the depression in cotton on the presence of the certificated stock of approximately 90,000 bales in New York. We consider this point an absurd evasion of the facts, for should any interests attempt to advance prices by taking up the New York certificated stock and shipping it out, there is little doubt that they would be overwhelmed by deliveries at designated Southern points.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Mayor Curley

A Practised Hand Takes the Wheel

THE coming of a new Mayor to School Street this morning was unattended by delay in the performance of municipal business for the good reason that our NEW Mayor is an OLD one.

Mr. Curley's hat and coat were hung in their old corner and almost in a jiffy he was saying, "Mr. Perkins, take this letter; are you ready? To Mr. Henry I. Harriman, president Boston Chamber of Commerce; my dear Mr. Harriman. . . ."

And so the machinery will be moving for four happy—we hope—and prosperous—we trust—municipal years.

Once a legislator, twice a councilman, seven times alderman or city councillor, twice a Member of Congress, and twice before the Chief Executive of New England's metropolis, the chieftain inaugurated today comes to a burdensome task qualified by experience as no other mayor has been qualified in Boston's history.

Mr. Curley has promised to give his native city the best that is in him. Boston could not ask for more. He is determined, he has said, to make this the BEST of his administrations. Boston could not WISH for more.

Malcolm E. Nichols

Good Mayor

THE four-year term of the mayor who goes "on vacation" must be judged by the record.

That record is altogether good.

We offer as among the major achievements of Mr. Nichols' administration the following list of ten, aware that members of the retiring mayor's circle of intimates might multiply it many times:

Building of 24 new schoolhouses.

Virtual completion of Boston Airport.

Widening and reconstruction of streets in the neighborhood of the new North Station.

New Congress Street bridge.

Widening Exchange Street.

Signs at street corners, to tell visitor or native exactly where he's at.

Adding 425 patrolmen to the Police Department.

Erection of new central fire stations on Broadway, Cambridge Street and Chestnut Hill Avenue.

Creation of a Traffic Commission.

Whenever public occasion has made it necessary for Mr. Nichols to represent the city he has carried himself so well as to please every citizen. He has been diligent about the city's business, faithful even in the little things. And in the give-and-take of local politics he has demonstrated an ability to hold his own with the masters, as witness his exchange of compliments with Mr. Frank A. Goodwin and Mr. Martin M. Lomasney.

We hope the former mayor may enjoy every minute of his "vacation."

While he is away, we should be glad to see the citizens of Boston march on the State House, and DEMAND such primary and election as are enjoyed by every other city in Massachusetts.

If, however, Boston is content with such a pea-under-the-shell arrangement as giving the mayoralty to the "high" man—with no preliminary sifting of all except the TWO leaders—well, we hope we may be as fortunate next time as we were four years ago.

Edison and Radio

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON

IN the recent celebrations held in honor of the famous inventor the chief stress has been thrown upon his perfection of the incandescent bulb for general illumination.

But a close study of Edison's life, as embodied in the monumental work, "Edison: His Life and Inventions," written by F. L. Dyer and T. C. Commerford, with the collaboration of W. M. Meadowcroft, indicates that Edison had a prominent or constructive part in many of the spectacular achievements of our time.

For good or for ill—as the Street goes—Edison exactly 50 years ago invented the "universal" stock ticker, as well as the unison device.

Perhaps it is not so well known that in 1871 he assisted Sholes, the inventor of the typewriter, in making the first successful working model.

This typewriter, a wooden affair, proved, records Edison, "a difficult thing to make commercial. The alignment of the letters was awful. One letter would be one-sixteenth of an inch above the others; and all the letters wanted to wander out of line. I worked on it until the machine gave fair results. . . . The typewriter I got into commercial shape is now known as the Remington."

BETTER known are Edison's inventions of automatic telegraph systems.

Triumphs of inventive fertility and mental range of ideas are Edison's extraordinary inventions—the duplex, quadruplex, sextuplex and multiplex telegraph systems.

The story of the invention of the phonograph is a modern romance of science which has often been told. But until comparatively recently little was known of Edison's association with the invention of the radio.

It is quite evident that Edison, as early as 1875, had hit upon the fundamental principle which lies back of the radio.

Absorbed in his other inventions, he did not press his discovery, and in consequence did not actively enter the radio field until many years later.

It seems that in 1875 Edison discovered a force hitherto unknown to him, to which he gave the name etheric force. This is a phenomenon, not known before that date, caused by electric waves in free space.

This discovery of etheric force by Edison has been termed "the birth of the radio," since without a knowledge of this force the radio might not today be an accomplished fact.

IN 1883, say Marten and Dyer, "Edison, while experimenting with his electric lamp, made another discovery which plays a most important part in every radio set.

"He discovered that an independent wire or plate placed between the legs of the filament of an incandescent lamp acted as a valve to control the flow of current.

"This was called the 'Edison Effect,' for which a patent was issued to him in 1883. This discovery covers the fundamental principles on which every radio tube is based."

Everyone, nowadays, is familiar with the affectionate or contemptuous way in which the radio announcer, in broadcasting a program, refers to the "mike."

In 1876 Edison invented the carbon telephone transmitter, an invention which made telephony a commercial art.

The present microphone is actually a glorified form of the carbon telephone transmitter.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

THIS is the dawn of a bigger and better year. Let us profit by the mistakes of 1929 and try not to get caught.

Although Andy Mellon has reduced the income tax by 1 per cent, the deductions still dominate the evasions.

The Chinese pay all their debts on the new year. Thank heaven, there is nothing yellow about us.

One thing we swear off is trying to wrap picnic lunches up in paper profits.

If a revenue agent shoots at us while we are going over Niagara Falls in a barrel we will sue him for endangering the public weal and woe.

Let us look forward into the future even when making a blindfold test on a cigarette.

The next time we claw a bankroll together let us invest in swamplands instead of Wall Street. It will not pay dividends. But neither will it demand margins.

We will respect our neighbor's ear-pieces this year by clamping down the radio at midnight and turning on the player-piano.

When a lady stands up in front of us in a crowded street car we will be a gentleman and wear smoked glasses.

When a pal offers us a flask of his poison we will start the year right by refusing it tooth and nail. After giving the year a good start we will then try to catch up on it.

We will not invest in any more baseball pools, Calcutta sweepstakes or arch supporters. If a man has flat feet he might as well allow 'em to have their own way.

When the sound track flops on the talking picture we will be nonchalant and read some imaginary titles out loud.

We will not hog the middle of the road and will always allow the rear honkers to pass us. If their car is fast enough.

We will do all these things and make 1930 a worthwhile year to tear off the calendar.

H. G. Wells Writes on

"The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

BESIDES these easily visible forms there are several groups of minute crustaceans, not only as whitish specks to the naked eye, but nevertheless of great economic importance.

Cyclops, a one-eyed, literally heartless crustacean, hardly a millimetre in length, swarms in countless numbers in lakes or pools or slow streams; this and the slightly larger Daphnia are among the commonest inhabitants of fresh water. The name "water-fleas" often applied to these animals, is misleading, because they feed on even more minute organisms, not as fleas do on the blood of larger creatures.

H. G. Wells

Daphnia is particularly and deservedly popular among amateur microscopists because her body (nearly all Daphnias are female) is so transparent that all her living organs, her beating heart and her churning bowels, can be watched with ease under a low power.

In the surface layers of the open sea there are prodigious numbers of minute crustaceans belonging to the same group as Cyclops, the Copepods, exceeding in multitude any other kind of marine animal except the unicellular ones, and being one of the most important sources of food fishes.

The late Sir Arthur Shipley, in his "Hunting Under the Microscope," says: "If on a sea voyage you tie a piece of bolting cloth loosely to the bath-tap which introduces the salt water into the bath in a very short time you will find a deposit or paste at the bottom, which is the main consists of copepods." The whole of the sea is like that.

There are more copepods in Plymouth Sound than there are people in the world—indeed, there are hundreds of times more.

We may note that crustaceans, like the great majority of arthropods, are enclosed as they are by a hard, unyielding coat of armor, have to moult that coating off from time to time so that they may grow.

The life of a lobster, for example, is a rhythmic alternation of two states. For a time he lives in his shell, not growing, but storing in his liver the materials necessary for a short but energetic burst of growth; then he retires to a safe recess in the rock and casts off his armor—not only the outer armor, but even the lining and teeth of his stomach and the lining of his intestines—and, temporarily defenseless and helpless because of the softness of his appendages, he uses the stored material to grow and then to build a new and more roomy skeleton.

This done, he emerges from his retreat, bigger and stronger for the change, into a warring world.

The most striking changes of shape during the life-history are seen in the group to which the barnacles belong.

There is no very evident resemblance between the lobster, with which we began our account of the crustacea, and an adult barnacle, permanently fixed as it is to a rock or to some other hard object, shut up in a little box of calcital plates, and feeding on minute organisms in the sea-water which it entangles by means of lashing movements of a cluster of long, feathery, whip-like arms.

Nevertheless, the barnacle began its life as a free-swimming larva, which was obviously a crustacean, and later settled down and changed its shape to suit its new sedentary life.

It did, in fact, very much what the sea-squirt did. In a parasitic animal, Sacculina, which is classified with the barnacles, the change is even more profound.

The newly-hatched Sacculina is a free-living creature with an outside skeleton, limbs, eyes, heart and so forth; but a sign of its destiny, it has no digestive tube.

It moults and acquires a new form, in which it resembles one of the water-fleas, Cypris, much as an embryo man resembles a fish, and it then swims around looking for a crab.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

"GOOD salesmanship" is the art of getting a man to want to buy a marriage license and a platinum ring, when he only dropped in for a couple of kisses.

One of the strange but happy delusions, under which a woman still labors, is that she can hold a man by TYING him to her.

No matter how threadbare a woman's love may have worn, a man never doubts that he can "patch it up, somehow," and make it stand a little more strain.

When a married man takes a little sentimental detour, he usually manages to leave a dotted line behind him by which he may tip-toe back home again when the gas gives out.

If you want to get along with the He-sex, never look too closely at the back of a small boy's neck after he's "washed" it, or at the logic of a man's alibi.

A man doesn't offer his heart to a woman, any more—he merely lends it to her, like a library book, for a week or so, with the date of return clearly understood.

It is "middle-age," when the love songs in musical comedies begin to seem a little longer, and the love-scenes between the dancing a little tiresome.

A married woman always clutches at a compliment, and carries it home and lays it before her husband as triumphantly as she would a vindication.

Domestic responsibilities lie on some men's shoulders as lightly as snowflakes and melt in the warmth of the first pretty woman's smile.

A woman is only as old as she thinks a man who loves her.

Hoover Led by Fanatics

Apparently Makes Failure of Administration Because He Does Not Know What People Want

WHEN HOOVER was elected, the people thought that he knew everything.

Apparently he does not know everything, and sometimes it seems as if he does not know anything.

Whenever a situation arises where action is required from the President, the President appoints a commission to secure information and to investigate indefinitely, and postpone action indefinitely.

As the Denver Post truly says:

"WHAT GOOD ARE THESE COMMISSIONS ANYHOW?"

We know that cheap politicians use them to dodge situations and avoid issues.

But Mr. Hoover is not a cheap politician; in fact, there are many who say he is not a politician at all.

However, there is no harm, and perhaps much democratic good is being enough of a politician to know what the people want done and to DO it.

The kind of politicians that are ridiculed and resented are the kind that know what the people want and do NOT do it.

Mr. Hoover apparently is not either of these two kinds of politicians, and this may be said not in praise but in apology.

He apparently has made something of a failure of his administration to date not merely because he does not DO what the people want, but because he evidently does not KNOW what they want.

He seems to believe, with Senator Harris of Georgia, that he was elected on the issues of prohibition and religion, and so is allowing himself to be led not by the public but by the fanatics.

It is a little too soon to forecast what the result will be, but the first result will probably be a Progressive Democratic House of Representatives; the second result a Republican Senate, but one opposed to many of the President's policies, particularly his foreign policies; and the third result, the election of a Progressive Democratic President in 1932.

These results would be CERTAIN if the Democrats had any competent leadership.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and came some beautiful photographs Adolph Bernheimer sent of his new home on a peak of the Pacific palisades which he has been building for many years. Then to breakfast and a waitress, the gay flatterer, asked if I happened to be Tully Marshall, the actor.

In the afternoon, to Hal Phyfe's studio to sit for my photograph and saw some remarkable studies of Valentino, Beth Merrill and Basil Rathbone and pleased that photographers no longer ask subjects to smile or cup a chin, but try to inspire natural poses.

So on a flanerie across town with Lisle and Bertha Bell, who have been in Hollywood these three years, and they scarcely knew the city, so greatly has it changed. Afterward to dine on a black Kentucky ham, sweet potatoes and a wedge of lemon meringue pie and home early to bed.

A package boy, or rather a former package boy, at a fashionable hotel in the East 50's, was discovered to be averaging a larger income than the general manager on a salary. He bootlegged mineral waters and ginger ale to patrons at half price.

Tipping has spread to fashionable soda fountains after theater. It has become a custom to leave a dime per drink for the server.

Many subway passengers drop off to sleep and ride past their stations daily. The close air in the tubes induces a lethargy, but most of the victims are those who have been out celebrating. On the other hand, there are innumerable subway-farers who are able to fall asleep and awaken as the train pulls into their station. It is a phenomenon they do not understand themselves. But they never fail to drift back to consciousness with a sudden start in time to scramble off.

Lillian Russell once boasted she had never traveled in the subway. In those days it was a high toned gesture, but not any more. Many in this age of autos, taxis and buses have not ridden in the subway for years.

The most pleasant underground trip is through the white-tiled, sanitary and clean-smelling Hudson Tunnel. It gives one the feeling of just having had a bath with a policeman looking on.

Much ado has been made of New York's subway manners, yet most of the impoliteness is sponsored by employes—especially those strong-armed huskies who use the methods of a football wedge in packing cars at rush hours. There is one bully at 14th street I'm going to kick on the shin some day and skeddaddle like everything.

What really started all these subway reflections was a trivial incident in a subway train late last evening. A one-armed man took a seat opposite and proceeded to roll up an umbrella as neatly as those in the store windows. I didn't know it could be done with two hands without a couple of helpers.

Speaking of one-armed dexterity, the most meticulously tied evening bow I ever saw was tied by a one-armed war hero who assisted a friend one evening in a Brussels hotel. A flip of the fingers and it was done.

In the theatrical district the other night the hind leg of a mounted patrolman's horse—a horse he had ridden for nine years—was broken by an automobile. Police regulations provide the officer must shoot the animal in such emergency. He placed the pistol to the horse's head three times, then stepped it and rushed off in tears. Every eye in the silent group that collected was glistening with tears. A fellow officer finally fired the shot.
